1. A secret circular, recently distributed to Communist leaders in Bogota, Colombia, stated that the Partido Comunista de Colombia (PCO) is about to enter a period of illegality and that certain changes within Party organisms are therefore necessary.
2. The document indicated that leadership must be concentrated in the hands of a minimum of persons in order to facilitate clandestine meetings. Cells have been advised that in times such as those approaching free discussion and democracy must disappear, and that all instructions from higher authorities in the Party must be carried out to the letter without questioning.
3. All directive committees should create an internal secretariat composed of three persons, including the Secretary General and the Secretary of Organization. This secretariat will then carry out the bulk of the work of the group. When the advice of a secretary not on the secretariat is needed, he will be notified of the matter under discussion in advance and called to the meeting at which this subject is to be brought up.
4. The Executive Committees, national, departmental and local, will arrange to hold meetings about once a month. Plenum meetings will be called only when absolutely necessary, and members whose particular fields are not on the agenda for such a gathering will ordinarily not attend. In every case the secretariat will consider the agenda beforehand, and those persons involved will be advised so that they will be prepared to contribute to the discussion.
