| SUBJECT Soviet Measures Against Partisans in Lithuania  NO. OF PAGES  25X1C  ALTE OF NO.  PLACE  COUNTRY USSR (lithuanian SSR)  DATE DISTR. 8 Aug. 1952  ALTE OF NO.  PLACE  COUNTRY USSR (lithuanian SSR)  AND OF PAGES  25X1C  AUGUST STATE OF NO. OF FACES  SUPPLEMENT TO .  REPORT NO.  THIS IS UNEVALUATED INFORMATION  THIS IS UNEVA |                             |   | D-I 0000/00/4E - 014 DDE   | and the state of t |
|--|-----------------------------|---|--|--|
| SOURTHY USER (Lithuanian SSR)  DATE DISTR. 8 Aug. 1952  COUNTRY USER (Lithuanian SSR)  DATE DISTR. 8 Aug. 1952  DATE OF AGES  25X1C  DATE OF AGES  25X1C  DATE OF AGES  25X1C  DATE OF AGES  25X1 SUPPLEMENT TO REPORT NO.  COUNTRY USER (Lithuanian SSR)  DATE OF AGES  25X1C  DATE OF AGES  25X1 SUPPLEMENT TO REPORT NO.  THIS IS UNEVALUATED INFORMATION  25X1  Soviet Roundups  1. In Lithuania frequent unannounced spot checks or roundups of persons suspected of anti-Seviet activity may take place during either the day or the night. Until 1947 major roundups of suspicious individuals were normal occurrences and usually involved the use of Soviet area of Forest rose Platelial Lake, not far from Kedainial (55-128), 25-585.  2. At the present this (July 1947), roundups the principle of persons suspected other the papers of all inhabitants. They occasionally make thorough searches of all houses, using in the process special spear-like reds of iron to pierce that they double cellings, and other possible places for hiding. During food, and other items are stolate. These area and place in the pierce of all inhabitants. They occasionally make thorough searches of all houses, using in the process special spear-like reds of iron to pierce that they double cellings, and other possible places for hiding. During food, and other items are stolate. These area and place in the pierce that they are frequently assisted by the militia and istrictical of neighboring localities. In carrying out important roundups, they may call on treeps from nearby army garrisons.  3. Occasionally a village may be surrounded secretly at night. From the estekirts the security forces will make the roundup, they may call on treeps from nearby army garrisons.  3. Occasionally a village may be surrounded secretly at night. From the estekirts the security forces will have for a support of the propose of life; if anyone appears outdo |                             | Approved For  | Release 2003/08/15 : CIA-RDP82-CENTRAL INTELL I GENCE AGE  | 00457R013300440010-9 FK GW ft  |
| INFORMATION REPORT REPORT NO CD NO.  COUNTRY USSR (Lithwanian SSR)  DATE DISTR. 8 Aug. 1952  AND OF PAGES  25X1C  NO. OF ENGLS.  SUPPLEMENT TO REPORT NO.  PAGE  AND OF PAGES  25X1 REPORT NO.  PAGE  AND OF ENGLS.  SUPPLEMENT TO REPORT NO.  THIS IS UNEVALUATED INFORMATION  AND THE OF THE ALLOSS AS ASSESSED TO SUMPRISHED TO REPORT NO.  THIS IS UNEVALUATED INFORMATION  THIS IS UNEVALUATED INFORMAT |                             | *   | SECRET   | 257/4  |
| COUNTRY USSR (Lithwanian SSR)  DATE OF NO.  SUBJECT Seviet Measures Against Partisans in Lithwania  NO. OF PAGES  25X1C  NO. OF ENCLS.  SUPPLEMENT TO .  REPORT NO.  25X1 SUPPLEMENT TO .  REPORT NO.  THIS IS UNEVALUATED INFORMATION  |                             |   |  | 25/  |
| COUNTRY USSR (Lithuanian SSR)  DATE OF Soviet Measures Against Partisans in Lithuania  NO. OF PAGES  25X1C  NO. OF ENCLS.  USTO BELOW 25X1  NO. OF ENCLS.  USETO BELOW  REPORT NO.  SUPPLEMENT TO REPORT NO.  THIS IS UNEVALUATED INFORMATION  THIS IS UNEVALUATED INFOR |                             |   |  |  |
| ANTE OF Soviet Measures Against Partisans in Lithuania  NO. OF PAGES  25X1C  NO. OF PAGES  25X1  |                             | A HOOD (7.11)   | •  |  |
| ATE OF ALCE  CQUIRED  25X1C  NO. OF ENGLS.  SUPPLEMENT TO REPORT NO.  SUPPLEMENT TO REPORT NO.  THIS IS UNEVALUATED INFORMATION  THI |                             |   |  | 2  |
| NO. OF ENCLS.  NO. OF ENCLS.  SUPPLEMENT TO  REPORT NO.  SUPPLEMENT TO  REPORT NO.  THIS IS UNEVALUATED INFORMATION  THIS IS UNEVALUATED INFORMATION  Soviet Roundups  1. In Lithuania frequent unannounced spot checks or roundups of persons suspected of arti-Soviet activity may take place during either the day or the night. Until 1947 major roundups of suspicious individuals were normal accurrences and usually involved the use of Soviet armed forces from several garrisons stationed in an area. The last large-excle roundup [ ] [ ] [ ] [ ] [ ] [ ] [ ] [ ] [ ] [  | OBJECT                      |   | ist rartisans in Lichuania   | NO. OF PAGES   |
| Soviet Roundups  1. In Lithuania frequent unannounced spet checks or roundups of persons suspected of anti-Seviet activity may take place during either the day or the night. Until 1947 major reundups of suspicious individuals were normal services and usually involved the use of Soviet armed forces from several garrisons stationed in an area. The last large-scale rounduals were normal persons suspected in July 1947 for the purpose of searching sub particular hidden in the Placetyne for the forces from several garrisons.  25)  26)  27)  28)  28)  28)  28)  28)  28)  28  |                             | 25/10   |  |  |
| Soviet Roundups  1. In Lithuania frequent unannounced spot checks or roundups of persons suspected of anti-Soviet activity may take place during either the day or the night. Until 19/3 major roundups of suspicious individuals were normal occurrences and usually involved the use of Soviet armed forces from several garrisons stationed in an area. The last large-scale roundup  1. In Lithuania frequent unannounced spot checks or roundups of persons suspected of anti-Soviet activity may take place during either the day or the night. Until 19/3 major roundups of suspicious individuals were normal occurrences and usually involved the use of Soviet armed forces from several garrisons stationed in an area. The last large-scale roundup    The properties of the propess of searching sut partisons hidding in the Pleaktyne Forest near Plateliai lake, not far from Kedainiai (55-18%, 23-592).  2. At the present time (July 1991), roundups involving large areas no lenger take place. Soviet forces now usually surround one or, rarely, two villages and check the papers of all inhabitants. They eccasionally make thorough searches at all houses, using in the process special spear-like reds of iron to pierce thatched roofs and piles of hay and straw. The searchers look for bunkers, double walls, double ceilings, and other possible places for hiding. During such searches, village inhabitants are invariably plundered. Their clathing, foed, and other items are stolen. These roundups are usually carried out by the MVD, who are frequently assisted by the militia and istrebiteli of neighboring lecalities. In carrying out important roundups, they may call on troeps from nearby army garrisons.  3. Occasionally a village may be surrounded secretly at night. From the sutskirts the security forces are usually dispersed along fringes of woods and remain there watching until thust before dawn. This procedure at these may vary instead of dispersing outside the village, the watchers may take over a farmhouse during the night, permitting plane to lea | LACE                        |   |  | SUPPLEMENT TO .  |
| THIS IS UNEVALUATED INFORMATION  THE WITCH STATE. WITHIN THE MARGING PITTLE IS, INCOMENTED.  THE WITCH STATE OF RECEIPT IS OR RECEIPT IS AN SUMMERING PERSON IN TRANSPORTED.  THE MARGINETIES OF THE PERSON IS PROSESSITED.  SOURCE Roundups  1. In Lithuania frequent unannounced spot checks or roundups of persons suspected of anti-Soviet activity may take place during either the day or the night. Until 1947 major roundups of suspicious individuals were normal occurrences and usually involved the use of Soviet amed ferces from several garrisons stationed in an area. The last large-scale roundup to the Plekstyne Forest near Plateliai Lake, not far from Kedainiai (55-18M, 23-59E).  2. At the present time (July 1951), roundups involving large areas no lenger take place. Soviet forces now usually surround one or, rarely, two villages and check the papers of all inhabitants. They eccasionally make thorough searches of all houses, using in the process special spear-like reds of iron to pierce thatched roofs and piles of hay and straw. The searchers look for bunkers, double walls, double ceilings, and other possible places for hiding, buring such searches, village inhabitants are invariably plundered. Their clathing, food, and other items are stolen. These roundups are usually carried out by the MVD, who are frequently assisted by the militia and istrebiteli of neighboring lecalities. In carrying out important roundups, they may call on treeps from nearby army garrisons.  3. Occasionally a village may be surrounded secretly at night. From the outskirts the security forces will watch for signs of life; if anyone appears outdoors, he will be stopped and immediately searched. These night watches are carried out with great secrecy so that home is forewarned. The security forces are usually dispersed along fringes of woods and remain there watching until just before dawn. This procedure at times may vary: instead of dispersing outside the village, the watchers may take over a farmhouse during the night, permitting nojone to leav | CQUIRE                      |   | 25X1   | REPORT NO.   |
| THIS IS UNEVALUATED INFORMATION  THIS IS UNEVALUATED  THIS IS UNEVALUATED INFORMATION  THIS IS UNEVALUATED  THIS IS UNEVALUATED INFORMATION  THIS IS UNEVALUATED  THIS IS UNEVALU |                             |   |  |  |
| Soviet Roundups  1. In Lithuania frequent unannounced spot checks or roundups of persons suspected of anti-Seviet activity may take place during either the day or the night. Until 1947 major roundups of Soviet armed ferces from several garrisons and usually involved the use of Soviet armed ferces from several garrisons stationed in an area. The last large-scale roundup tech place in July 1947 for the purpose of searching ent partisans hiding in the Plekstyne Forest near Plateliai Lake, not far from Kedainai (55-18N, 23-59E).  2. At the present time (July 1951), roundups involving large areas no lenger take place. Soviet ferces new usually surround one or, rarely, two villages and check the papers of all inhabitants. They eccasionally make thorough searches of all chabitants are invariably plundered. Their clathing, food, and other items are stolen. These roundups are usually pundered. Their clathing, food, and other items are stolen. These roundups are usually on the PMD, who are frequently assisted by the millitia and istrebiteli of neighboring localities. In carrying out important roundups, they may call on treeps from nearby army garrisons.  3. Occasionally a village may be surrounded secretly at night. From the sutskirts the security forces will watch for signs of life; if anyone appears outdeers, he will be stopped and immediately searched. These night watches are carried out with great secrecy so that noden is forewarned. These night watches are carried out with great secrecy at times may vary: instead of dispersing outside the village until it is light. If the Soviet authorities have reason to suspect that a village until it is light. If the Soviet authorities have reason to suspect that a village is in centact  | OF THE UNITE                | D STATES, WITHIN THE MEANING OF TITLE 1   | LB, SECTIONS 793   |  |
| Soviet Roundups  1. In Lithuania frequent unannounced spot checks or roundups of persons suspected of anti-Seviet activity may take place during either the day or the night. Until 1947 major reundups of suspicious individuals were normal occurrences and usually involved the use of Soviet armed ferces from several garrisons stationed in an area. The last large-scale roundup teck place in July 1947 for the purpose of searching out partisans hiding in the Plekstyne Ferest near Plateliai Lake, not far from Kedainiai (55-18M, 23-59E).  2. At the present time (July 1951), roundups involving large areas ne lenger take place. Soviet ferces new usually surround one or, rarely, two villages and check the papers of all inhabitants. They eccasionally make thorough searches of all houses, using in the process special spear-like reds of iron to pierce thatched reofs and piles of hay and straw. The searchers look for bunkers, deuble walls, double ceilings, and other possible places for hiding. During such searches, village inhabitants are invariably plundered. Their clething, food, and other items are stolen. These roundups are usually carried out by the MVD, who are frequently assisted by the militia and istrabible of neighboring localities. In carrying out important roundups, they may call on treeps from nearby army garrisons.  3. Occasionally a village may be surrounded secretly at night. From the cutskirts the security forces will watch for signs of life; if anyone appears outdoers, he will be stopped and immediately searched. These night watches are carried out with great secrecy so that nogen is forewarned. The security forces are usually dispersed along fringes of woods and remain there watching until just before dawn. This procedure at times may vary: instead of dispersing outside the village, the watchers may take over a farmhouse during the night, permitting noise to leave, posting guards in the yard, and remaining there observing the village until it is light. If the Soviet authorities have reason to suspect that a | AND 794, OFLATION OF IT | THE U.S. CODE, AS AMENDED. ITS TRANSMS CONTENTS TO OR RECEIPT BY AN UNAUTHO   | AISSION OR REVE-DRIZED PERSON IS   | UNEVALUATED INFORMATION  |
| Soviet Roundups  1. In Lithuania frequent unannounced spot checks or roundups of persons suspected of anti-Soviet activity may take place during either the day or the night. Until 1947 major roundups of suspicious individuals were normal occurrences and usually involved the use of Soviet armed forces from several garrisons stationed in an area. The last large-scale roundup to the property of the purpose of searching sut partisans hidding in the Plekstyne Forest near Plateliai Lake, not far from Kedainiai (55-18N, 23-59E).  2. At the present time (July 1951), roundups involving large areas no lenger take place. Seviet forces new usually surround one or, rarely, two villages and check the papers of all inhabitants. They eccasionally make thorough searches of all houses, using in the process special spear-like reds of firon to pierce thatched roofs and piles of hay and straw. The searchers look for bunkers, double walls, double ceilings, and other possible places for hiding. During such searches, village inhabitants are invariably plundered. Their clething, food, and other items are stolen. These roundups are usually carried out by the MVD, who are frequently assisted by the militia and istrebiteli of neighboring localities. In carrying out important roundups, they may call on treeps from nearby army garrisons.  3. Occasionally a village may be surrounded secretly at night. From the outskirts the security forces will watch for signs of life; if anyone appears outdoors, he will be stopped and immediately searched. These night watches are carried out with great secrecy so that note is forewarned. The security forces are usually dispersed along fringes of woods and remain there watching until just before dawn. This procedure at times may vary: instead of dispersing outside the village, the watchers may take over a farmhouse during the night, permitting notion to leave, posting guards in the yard, and remaining there observing the village in centact.  CLASSIFICATION  SECRET  |                             | THE REPRESENTATION OF THIS PURP   |  | 25)  |
| 1. In Lithmania frequent unannounced spot checks or roundups of persons suspected of anti-Soviet activity may take place during either the day or the night. Until 1947 major roundups of suspicious individuals were normal occurrences and usually involved the use of Soviet armed forces from several garrisons stationed in an area. The last large-scale roundup took place in July 1947 for the purpose of searching out partisans hiding in the Flekstyne Forest near Flateliai Lake, not far from Kedainiai (55-18N, 23-59E).  2. At the present time (July 1951), roundups involving large areas no longer take place. Soviet forces new usually surround one or, rarely, two villages and check the papers of all inhabitants. They occasionally make thorough searches of all houses, using in the process special spear-like reds of iron to pierce thatched roofs and piles of hay and straw. The searchers look for bunkers, double walls, double ceilings, and other possible places for hiding. During such searches, village inhabitants are invariably plundered. Their clething, food, and other items are stolen. These roundups are usually carried out by the MVD, who are frequently assisted by the militia and istrobiteli of neighboring localities. In carrying out important roundups, they may call on troops from nearby army garrisons.  3. Occasionally a village may be surrounded secretly at night. From the outskirts the security forces will watch for signs of life; if anyone appears outdoors, he will be stopped and immediately searched. These night watches are carried out with great secrecy so that nejone is forewarned. These curity forces are usually dispersed along fringes of woods and remain there watching until just before dawn. This procedure at times may vary: instead of dispersing outside the village, the watchers may take over a farmhouse during the night, permitting noten to leave, posting guards in the yard, and remaining there observing the village in in centact CLASSIFICATION  SECRET  |                             |   |  |  |
| 1. In Lithmania frequent unannounced spot checks or roundups of persons suspected of anti-Soviet activity may take place during either the day or the night. Until 1947 major roundups of suspicious individuals were normal occurrences and usually involved the use of Soviet armed forces from several garrisons stationed in an area. The last large-scale roundup took place in July 1947 for the purpose of searching out partisans hiding in the Flekstyne Forest near Flateliai Lake, not far from Kedainiai (55-18N, 23-59E).  2. At the present time (July 1951), roundups involving large areas no longer take place. Soviet forces new usually surround one or, rarely, two villages and check the papers of all inhabitants. They occasionally make thorough searches of all houses, using in the process special spear-like reds of iron to pierce thatched roofs and piles of hay and straw. The searchers look for bunkers, double walls, double ceilings, and other possible places for hiding. During such searches, village inhabitants are invariably plundered. Their clething, food, and other items are stolen. These roundups are usually carried out by the MVD, who are frequently assisted by the militia and istrobiteli of neighboring localities. In carrying out important roundups, they may call on troops from nearby army garrisons.  3. Occasionally a village may be surrounded secretly at night. From the outskirts the security forces will watch for signs of life; if anyone appears outdoors, he will be stopped and immediately searched. These night watches are carried out with great secrecy so that nejone is forewarned. These curity forces are usually dispersed along fringes of woods and remain there watching until just before dawn. This procedure at times may vary: instead of dispersing outside the village, the watchers may take over a farmhouse during the night, permitting noten to leave, posting guards in the yard, and remaining there observing the village in in centact CLASSIFICATION  SECRET  |                             | Sowiet Roundung   |  |  |
| ef anti-Soviet activity may take place during either the day or the night. Until 1947 major reundups of suspicious individuals were normal occurrences and usually involved the use of Soviet armed forces from several garrisons stationed in an area. The last large-scale roundup teck place in July 1947 for the purpose of searching eut partisans hiding in the Plekstyne Forest near Plateliai Lake, not far from Kedainiai (55-18N, 23-59E).  2. At the present time (July 1951), roundups involving large areas ne lenger take place. Soviet forces new usually surround one or, rarely, two villages and check the papers of all inhabitants. They eccasionally make thorough searches of all houses, using in the process special spear-like reds of iron to pierce thatched roofs and piles of hay and straw. The searchers look for bunkers, double walls, double ceillings, and other possible places for hiding. During such searches, village inhabitants are invariably plundered. Their clething, food, and other items are stolen. These roundups are usually carried out by the MVD, who are frequently assisted by the militia and istrobiteli of neighboring lecalities. In carrying out important roundups, they may call on treeps from nearby army garrisons.  3. Occasionally a village may be surrounded secretly at night. From the outskirts the security forces will watch for signs of life; if anyone appears outdoors, he will be stopped and immediately searched. These night watches are carried out with great secrecy so that nojene is forewarned. These night watches are carried out with great secrecy so that nojene is forewarned. The senity forces are usually dispersed along fringes of woods and remain there watching until just before dawn. This procedure at times may vary: instead of dispersing outside the village, the watchers may take over a farmhouse during the night, permitting nojone to leave, posting guards in the yard, and remaining there observing the village is in centact CLASSIFICATION  SECRET   | 1.                          |   | unannounced spot checks or   |  |
| and usually involved the use of Soviet armed forces from several garrisons stationed in an area. The last large-scale roundup  |                             |   |  | rounding of narcons overested  |
| in July 1947 for the purpose of searching out partisans hiding in the Plekstyne Ferest near Plateliai Lake, not far from Kedainiai (55-18N, 23-59E).  2. At the present time (July 1951), roundups involving large areas no lenger take place. Seviet forces new usually surround one or, rarely, two villages and check the papers of all inhabitants. They occasionally make thorough searches of all houses, using in the process special spear-like reds of iron to pierce thatched roofs and piles of hay and straw. The searchers look for bunkers, double walls, double ceilings, and other possible places for hiding. During such searches, village inhabitants are invariably plundered. Their clothing, food, and other items are stolen. These roundups are usually carried out by the MVD, who are frequently assisted by the militia and istrebiteli of neighboring localities. In carrying out important roundups, they may call on treeps from nearby army garrisons.  3. Occasionally a village may be surrounded secretly at night. From the outskirts the security forces will watch for signs of life; if anyone appears outdoors, he will be stopped and immediately searched. These night watches are carried out with great secrecy so that noone is forewarned. The security forces are usually dispersed along fringes of woods and remain there watching until just before dawn. This procedure at times may vary: instead of dispersing outside the village, the watchers may take over a farmhouse during the night, permitting noone to leave, posting guards in the yard, and remaining there observing the village until it is light. If the Soviet authorities have reason to suspect that a village is in centact  CLASSIFICATION  SECRET   |                             | of anti-Soviet activi   | ity may take place during e  | either the day or the night.   |
| 2. At the present time (July 1951), roundups involving large areas no lenger take place. Soviet forces new usually surround one or, rarely, two villages and check the papers of all inhabitants. They eccasionally make thorough searches of all houses, using in the process special spear-like reds of iron to pierce thatched roofs and piles of hay and straw. The searchers look for bunkers, double walls, double ceilings, and other possible places for hiding. During such searches, village inhabitants are invariably plundered. Their clothing, food, and other items are stolen. These roundups are usually carried out by the MVD, who are frequently assisted by the militia and istrebiteli of neighboring localities. In carrying out important roundups, they may call on treeps from nearby army garrisons.  3. Occasionally a village may be surrounded secretly at night. From the outskirts the security forces will watch for signs of life; if anyone appears outdoors, he will be stepped and immediately searched. These night watches are carried out with great secrecy so that notone is forewarned. The security forces are usually dispersed along fringes of woods and remain there watching until just before dawn. This procedure at times may vary: instead of dispersing outside the village, the watchers may take over a farmhouse during the night, permitting notone to leave, posting guards in the yard, and remaining there observing the village until it is light. If the Soviet authorities have reason to suspect that a village is in centact   |                             | of anti-Soviet activiUntil 1947 major rounand usually involved  | ty may take place during endups of suspicious individuate the use of Soviet armed force  | either the day or the night.als were normal occurrencesces from several garrisons  |
| place. Soviet ferces new usually surround one or, rarely, two villages and check the papers of all inhabitants. They eccasionally make thorough searches of all houses, using in the process special spear-like reds of iron to pierce thatched roofs and piles of hay and straw. The searchers look for bunkers, deuble walls, double ceilings, and other possible places for hiding. During such searches, village inhabitants are invariable places for hiding. During food, and other items are stolen. These roundups are usually carried out by the MVD, who are frequently assisted by the militia and istrebiteli of neighboring localities. In carrying out important roundups, they may call on troops from nearby army garrisons.  3. Occasionally a village may be surrounded secretly at night. From the outskirts the security forces will watch for signs of life; if anyone appears outdoors, he will be stepped and immediately searched. These night watches are carried out with great secrecy so that noone is forewarned. These curity forces are usually dispersed along fringes of woods and remain there watching until just before dawn. This procedure at times may vary: instead of dispersing outside the village, the watchers may take over a farmhouse during the night, permitting noone to leave, posting guards in the yard, and remaining there observing the village until it is light. If the Soviet authorities have reason to suspect that a village is in contact  |                             | of anti-Soviet activiUntil 1947 major rounand usually involvedstationed in an area.in July 1947 for the   | ty may take place during edups of suspicious individuate the use of Soviet armed force. The last large-scale round purpose of searching out par  | either the day or the night. als were normal occurrences ces from several garrisons dup  |
| ef all houses, using in the process special spear-like reds of iron to pierce thatched roofs and piles of hay and straw. The searchers look for bunkers, double walls, double ceilings, and other possible places for hiding. During such searches, village inhabitants are invariably plundered. Their clething, food, and other items are stolen. These roundups are usually carried out by the MVD, who are frequently assisted by the militia and istrebiteli of neighboring localities. In carrying out important roundups, they may call on troops from nearby army garrisons.  3. Occasionally a village may be surrounded secretly at night. From the outskirts the security forces will watch for signs of life; if anyone appears outdoors, he will be stopped and immediately searched. These night watches are carried out with great secrecy so that noise is forewarned. These curity forces are usually dispersed along fringes of woods and remain there watching until just before dawn. This procedure at times may vary: instead of dispersing outside the village, the watchers may take over a farmhouse during the night, permitting noise to leave, posting guards in the yard, and remaining there observing the village until it is light. If the Soviet authorities have reason to suspect that a village is in centact  CLASSIFICATION  SECRET  |                             | of anti-Soviet activiUntil 1947 major rounand usually involvedstationed in an area.in July 1947 for theForest near Plateliai  | ty may take place during endups of suspicious individual the use of Soviet armed force. The last large-scale round purpose of searching out par Lake, not far from Kedainis  | either the day or the night.  als were normal occurrences  ces from several garrisons  dup   |
| double walls, double ceilings, and other possible places for hiding. During such searches, village inhabitants are invariably plundered. Their clething, food, and other items are stolen. These roundups are usually carried out by the MVD, who are frequently assisted by the militia and istrebiteli of neighboring localities. In carrying out important roundups, they may call on troops from nearby army garrisons.  3. Occasionally a village may be surrounded secretly at night. From the outskirts the security forces will watch for signs of life; if anyone appears outdoors, he will be stepped and immediately searched. These night watches are carried out with great secrecy so that noine is forewarned. The security forces are usually dispersed along fringes of woods and remain there watching until just before dawn. This procedure at times may vary: instead of dispersing outside the village, the watchers may take over a farmhouse during the night, permitting noine to leave, posting guards in the yard, and remaining there observing the village until it is light. If the Soviet authorities have reason to suspect that a village is in centact  CLASSIFICATION  SECRET   |                             | of anti-Soviet activiUntil 1947 major rounand usually involvedstationed in an area.in July 1947 for theForest near PlateliaiAt the present time (place. Soviet forces   | ty may take place during endups of suspicious individual the use of Soviet armed force. The last large-scale round purpose of searching out particles, not far from Kedainis July 1951), roundups involving new usually surround one or  | either the day or the night.  als were normal occurrences  ces from several garrisons  dup   |
| food, and other items are stolen. These roundups are usually carried out by the MVD, who are frequently assisted by the militia and istrebiteli of neighboring localities. In carrying out important roundups, they may call on troops from nearby army garrisons.  3. Occasionally a village may be surrounded secretly at night. From the outskirts the security forces will watch for signs of life; if anyone appears outdoors, he will be stopped and immediately searched. These night watches are carried out with great secrecy so that noone is forewarned. The security forces are usually dispersed along fringes of woods and remain there watching until just before dawn. This procedure at times may vary: instead of dispersing outside the village, the watchers may take over a farmhouse during the night, permitting noone to leave, posting guards in the yard, and remaining there observing the village until it is light. If the Soviet authorities have reason to suspect that a village is in centact  CLASSIFICATION  SECRET  STATE X NAVY X NARB DISTRIBUTION  |                             | of anti-Soviet activiUntil 1947 major rounand usually involvedstationed in an area.in July 1947 for theForest near PlateliaiAt the present time (place. Soviet forcescheck the papers of aof all houses, using  | ty may take place during edups of suspicious individual the use of Soviet armed force the last large-scale round purpose of searching out par Lake, not far from Kedainis July 1951), roundups involving new usually surround one or all inhabitants. They occasion the process special spear  | either the day or the night.  als were normal occurrences ces from several garrisons dupteok place rtisans hiding in the Plekstyne ai (55-18N, 23-59E).  ing large areas ne lenger take r, rarely, two villages and ichally make thorough searches r-like reds of iron to pierce   |
| boring lecalities. In carrying out important roundups, they may call on treeps from nearby army garrisons.  3. Occasionally a village may be surrounded secretly at night. From the outskirts the security forces will watch for signs of life; if anyone appears outdoors, he will be stepped and immediately searched. These night watches are carried out with great secrecy so that note is forewarned. The security forces are usually dispersed along fringes of woods and remain there watching until just before dawn. This procedure at times may vary: instead of dispersing outside the village, the watchers may take over a farmhouse during the night, permitting note to leave, posting guards in the yard, and remaining there observing the village until it is light. If the Soviet authorities have reason to suspect that a village is in centact  CLASSIFICATION  SECRET  STATE X NAVY X NAVE DISTRIBUTION  |                             | of anti-Soviet activiUntil 1947 major rounand usually involvedstationed in an area.in July 1947 for theForest near PlateliaiAt the present time (place. Soviet forcescheck the papers of aof all houses, usingthatched roofs and pidouble walls, double   | ty may take place during edups of suspicious individual the use of Soviet armed force. The last large-scale round purpose of searching out par Lake, not far from Kedainis July 1951), roundups involvis new usually surround one or all inhabitants. They occasi in the process special spear les of hay and straw. The secilings, and other possible   | either the day or the night.  als were normal occurrences  ces from several garrisons dup  |
| 3. Occasionally a village may be surrounded secretly at night. From the outskirts the security forces will watch for signs of life; if anyone appears outdoors, he will be stepped and immediately searched. These night watches are carried out with great secrecy so that noone is forewarned. The security forces are usually dispersed along fringes of woods and remain there watching until just before dawn. This procedure at times may vary: instead of dispersing outside the village, the watchers may take over a farmhouse during the night, permitting noone to leave, posting guards in the yard, and remaining there observing the village until it is light. If the Soviet authorities have reason to suspect that a village is in centact  CLASSIFICATION  SECRET  STATE X NAMY X NSRB DISTRIBUTION  |                             | of anti-Soviet activiUntil 1947 major rounand usually involvedstationed in an area.in July 1947 for theForest near PlateliaiAt the present time (place. Soviet forcescheck the papers of aof all houses, usingthatched roofs and pidouble walls, doublesuch searches, villagfood, and other items   | ty may take place during endups of suspicious individual the use of Soviet armed force. The last large—scale round purpose of searching out par Lake, not far from Kedainis (July 1951), roundups involving new usually surround one or all inhabitants. They occasion the process special spear cles of hay and straw. The secilings, and other possible enhabitants are invariably are stolen. These roundups  | either the day or the night.  als were normal occurrences  ces from several garrisons  dup   |
| the security forces will watch for signs of life; if anyone appears outdoors, he will be stepped and immediately searched. These night watches are carried out with great secrecy so that note is forewarned. The security forces are usually dispersed along fringes of woods and remain there watching until just before dawn. This procedure at times may vary: instead of dispersing outside the village, the watchers may take over a farmhouse during the night, permitting note to leave, posting guards in the yard, and remaining there observing the village until it is light. If the Soviet authorities have reason to suspect that a village is in contact  CLASSIFICATION  SECRET  STATE X NAVY X NSRB DISTRIBUTION  |                             | of anti-Soviet activiUntil 1947 major rounand usually involvedstationed in an area.in July 1947 for theForest near PlateliaiAt the present time (place. Soviet forcescheck the papers of aof all houses, usingthatched roofs and pidouble walls, doublesuch searches, villagfood, and other itemsthe MVD, who are freq  | ty may take place during endups of suspicious individual the use of Soviet armed force. The last large-scale round purpose of searching out par Lake, not far from Kedainis (July 1951), roundups involving new usually surround one or all inhabitants. They occasify in the process special spear ceilings, and straw. The secondary and straw inhabitants are invariably are stolen. These roundups are stolen. These roundups quently assisted by the milit  | either the day or the night.  als were normal occurrences  ces from several garrisons  dup   |
| he will be stepped and immediately searched. These night watches are carried out with great secrecy so that noone is forewarned. The security forces are usually dispersed along fringes of woods and remain there watching until just before dawn. This procedure at times may vary: instead of dispersing outside the village, the watchers may take over a farmhouse during the night, permitting noone to leave, posting guards in the yard, and remaining there observing the village until it is light. If the Soviet authorities have reason to suspect that a village is in contact  CLASSIFICATION  SECRET  STATE X NAVY X NSRB DISTRIBUTION  | 2.                          | of anti-Soviet activiUntil 1947 major rounand usually involvedstationed in an area.in July 1947 for theForest near PlateliaiAt the present time (place. Soviet forcescheck the papers of aof all houses, usingthatched roofs and pidouble walls, doublesuch searches, villagfood, and other itemsthe MVD, who are freqboring localities. Ifrom nearby army garm   | ty may take place during edups of suspicious individual the use of Soviet armed force the use of Soviet armed force purpose of searching out par Lake, not far from Kedainis [July 1951], roundups involving new usually surround one or all inhabitants. They occasion the process special spear les of hay and straw. The sceilings, and other possible inhabitants are invariably are stolen. These roundups quently assisted by the milit on carrying out important registers.   | either the day or the night.  als were normal occurrences  ces from several garrisons dup  |
| dispersed along fringes of woods and remain there watching until just before dawn. This procedure at times may vary: instead of dispersing outside the village, the watchers may take over a farmhouse during the night, permitting no one to leave, posting guards in the yard, and remaining there observing the village until it is light. If the Soviet authorities have reason to suspect that a village is in contact  CLASSIFICATION  SECRET  STATE X NAVY X NSR8  DISTRIBUTION   | 2.                          | of anti-Soviet activiUntil 1947 major rounand usually involvedstationed in an area.in July 1947 for theForest near PlateliaiAt the present time (place. Soviet forcescheck the papers of aof all houses, usingthatched roofs and pidouble walls, doublesuch searches, villagfood, and other itemsthe MVD, who are freqboring localities. Ifrom nearby army garnOccasionally a villag  | ty may take place during edups of suspicious individual the use of Soviet armed force the use of Soviet armed force the last large—scale round purpose of searching out par Lake, not far from Kedainis July 1951), roundups involving the usually surround one or all inhabitants. They occased in the process special spear les of hay and straw. The secilings, and other possible inhabitants are invariably are stolen. These roundups quently assisted by the milit on carrying out important rourisons.   | either the day or the night.  als were normal occurrences  ces from several garrisons dup  |
| watchers may take over a farmhouse during the night, permitting no no to leave, posting guards in the yard, and remaining there observing the village until it is light. If the Soviet authorities have reason to suspect that a village is in contact  CLASSIFICATION SECRET  | 2.                          | of anti-Soviet activiUntil 1947 major rounand usually involvedstationed in an area.in July 1947 for theForest near PlateliaiAt the present time (place. Soviet forcescheck the papers of aof all houses, usingthatched roofs and pidouble walls, doublesuch searches, villagfood, and other itemsthe MVD, who are freeboring localities. Ifrom nearby army garnOccasionally a villagthe security forces wehe will be stepped an   | ty may take place during edups of suspicious individual the use of Soviet armed force. The last large—scale round purpose of searching out par Lake, not far from Kedainis July 1951), roundups involving new usually surround one or all inhabitants. They occasi in the process special spear cles of hay and straw. The sceilings, and other possible inhabitants are invariably are stolen. These roundups puently assisted by the milit in carrying out important rounds are may be surrounded secretly fill watch for signs of life; dimmediately searched. The  | either the day or the night.  als were normal occurrences  ces from several garrisons  dup   |
| posting guards in the yard, and remaining there observing the village until it is light. If the Soviet authorities have reason to suspect that a village is in centact  CLASSIFICATION SECRET  | 2.                          | of anti-Soviet activity Until 1947 major round and usually involved stationed in an area. In July 1947 for the Forest near Plateliai.  At the present time (place. Soviet forces check the papers of a of all houses, using thatched roofs and pidouble walls, double such searches, villag food, and other items food, and other items the MVD, who are free boring localities. If from nearby army garm Occasionally a villag the security forces whe will be stepped an with great secrecy sedispersed along fring   | ty may take place during edups of suspicious individual the use of Soviet armed force the use of Soviet armed force of The last large-scale round purpose of searching out par Lake, not far from Kedainis [July 1951], roundups involving new usually surround one or all inhabitants. They occasiful inhabitants. They occasiful the process special spearles of hay and straw. The secilings, and other possible inhabitants are invariably are stolen. These roundups quently assisted by the militin carrying out important rounding the inhabitants are invariably are stolen. These roundups quently assisted by the militin carrying out important rounding the second of life; and immediately searched. The that no one is forewarned. The other noone is forewarned.  | either the day or the night.  als were normal occurrences ces from several garrisons dup   |
| CLASSIFICATION SECRET  STATE X NAVY X NSRB DISTRIBUTION  | 2.                          | of anti-Soviet activity Until 1947 major round and usually involved stationed in an area. in July 1947 for the Forest near Plateliai At the present time (place. Soviet forces check the papers of a sof all houses, using thatched roofs and pidouble walls, double such searches, villag food, and other items the MVD, who are frequently a will be security forces whe will be stopped an with great secrecy so dispersed along fring This procedure at tim watchers may take ove   | ty may take place during edups of suspicious individual the use of Soviet armed force the use of Soviet armed force are supposed in the last large—scale round purpose of searching out par Lake, not far from Kedainis [July 1951], roundups involving new usually surround one or all inhabitants. They occasiful inhabitants are inversables of hay and straw. The secilings, and other possibles inhabitants are invariably are stolen. These roundups quently assisted by the militin carrying out important requisions.  The may be surrounded secretly fill watch for signs of life; and immediately searched. The other notes is forewarned, see of woods and remain there were may vary: instead of dispiral farmhouse during the night residence.  | either the day or the night.  als were normal occurrences ces from several garrisons dup   |
| STATE X NAVY X NSRB DISTRIBUTION   | 2.                          | of anti-Soviet activiUntil 1947 major rounand usually involvedstationed in an area.in July 1947 for theForest near PlateliaiAt the present time (place. Soviet forcescheck the papers of aof all houses, usingthatched roofs and pidouble walls, doublesuch searches, villagfood, and other itemsthe MVD, who are freqboring localities. Ifrom nearby army garnOccasionally a villagthe security forces wehe will be stepped anwith great secrecy seedispersed along fringThis procedure at timwatchers may take oveposting guards in the | ty may take place during edups of suspicious individual the use of Soviet armed force. The last large—scale round purpose of searching out par Lake, not far from Kedainis July 1951), roundups involvis new usually surround one or all inhabitants. They occasi in the process special spear les of hay and straw. The sceilings, and other possible inhabitants are invariably are stolen. These roundups uently assisted by the milit in carrying out important rourisons.  The may be surrounded secretly fill watch for signs of life; and immediately searched. The othat noise is forewarned, see of woods and remain there are a farmhouse during the night yard, and remaining there of yard, and remaining there of yard, and remaining there of the search of suspending the residual search and the search of dispersions of the search of the page of woods and remain there are a farmhouse during the night yard, and remaining there of yard, and remaining there of the purpose of the search of the page of | either the day or the night.  als were normal occurrences  ces from several garrisons  dup   |
| STATE X NAVY X NSRB DISTRIBUTION   | 2.                          | of anti-Soviet activiUntil 1947 major rounand usually involvedstationed in an area.in July 1947 for theForest near PlateliaiAt the present time (place. Soviet forcescheck the papers of aof all houses, usingthatched roofs and pidouble walls, doublesuch searches, villagfood, and other itemsthe MVD, who are freqboring localities. Ifrom nearby army garnOccasionally a villagthe security forces wehe will be stepped anwith great secrecy seedispersed along fringThis procedure at timwatchers may take oveposting guards in the | ty may take place during edups of suspicious individual the use of Soviet armed force. The last large—scale round purpose of searching out par Lake, not far from Kedainis July 1951), roundups involvis new usually surround one or all inhabitants. They occasi in the process special spear les of hay and straw. The sceilings, and other possible inhabitants are invariably are stolen. These roundups uently assisted by the milit in carrying out important rourisons.  The may be surrounded secretly fill watch for signs of life; and immediately searched. The othat noise is forewarned, see of woods and remain there are a farmhouse during the night yard, and remaining there of yard, and remaining there of yard, and remaining there of the search of suspending the residual search and the search of dispersions of the search of the page of woods and remain there are a farmhouse during the night yard, and remaining there of yard, and remaining there of the purpose of the search of the page of | either the day or the night.  als were normal occurrences  ces from several garrisons  dup   |
|  | 2.                          | of anti-Soviet activiUntil 1947 major rounand usually involvedstationed in an area.in July 1947 for theForest near PlateliaiAt the present time (place. Soviet forcescheck the papers of aof all houses, usingthatched roofs and pidouble walls, doublesuch searches, villagfood, and other itemsthe MVD, who are freqboring localities. Ifrom nearby army garnOccasionally a villagthe security forces wehe will be stepped anwith great secrecy seedispersed along fringThis procedure at timwatchers may take oveposting guards in the | ty may take place during edups of suspicious individual the use of Soviet armed force. The last large—scale round purpose of searching out par Lake, not far from Kedainis July 1951), roundups involvis new usually surround one or all inhabitants. They occasi in the process special spear les of hay and straw. The sceilings, and other possible inhabitants are invariably are stolen. These roundups uently assisted by the milit in carrying out important rourisons.  The may be surrounded secretly fill watch for signs of life; and immediately searched. The othat noise is forewarned, see of woods and remain there are a farmhouse during the night yard, and remaining there of yard, and remaining there of yard, and remaining there of the search of suspending the residual search and the search of dispersions of the search of the page of woods and remain there are a farmhouse during the night yard, and remaining there of yard, and remaining there of the purpose of the search of the page of | either the day or the night.  als were normal occurrences  ces from several garrisons  dup   |
| ARMY X AIR X FBI   | 2.                          | of anti-Soviet activity Until 1947 major round and usually involved stationed in an area. in July 1947 for the Forest near Plateliai At the present time (place. Soviet forces check the papers of a check the papers of all houses, using thatched roofs and pidouble walls, double such searches, villag food, and other items the MVD, who are frequency army garm. Occasionally a villag the security forces whe will be stopped an with great secrecy se dispersed along fring This procedure at time watchers may take over posting guards in the light. If the Soviet  | ty may take place during edups of suspicious individual the use of Soviet armed force the use of Soviet armed force are purpose of searching out par Lake, not far from Kedainis [July 1951], roundups involving new usually surround one or all inhabitants. They occasion the process special spear les of hay and straw. The sceilings, and other possible inhabitants are invariably are stolen. These roundups quently assisted by the milit are carrying out important rounding the may be surrounded secretly fill watch for signs of life; dimmediately searched. The that note is forewarmed, es of woods and remain there is may vary: instead of dispural farmhouse during the night yard, and remaining there of authorities have reason to  | either the day or the night.  als were normal occurrences  ces from several garrisons  dup   |
|  | 2.3.                    | ef anti-Soviet activi Until 1947 major roun and usually involved stationed in an area. in July 1947 for the Forest near Plateliai  At the present time ( place. Soviet forces check the papers of a ef all houses, using thatched roofs and pi double walls, double such searches, villag food, and other items the MVD, who are freq boring localities. I from nearby army garn  Occasionally a villag the security forces w he will be stepped an with great secrecy se dispersed along fring This procedure at tim watchers may take ove posting guards in the light. If the Soviet  | ty may take place during edups of suspicious individual the use of Soviet armed force the use of Soviet armed force The last large-scale round purpose of searching out par Lake, not far from Kedainia Lake, not far from Kedainia July 1951), roundups involving new usually surround one or all inhabitants. They occasiful the process special spearles of hay and straw. The sceilings, and other possible in the process special spearles of hay and straw. The sceilings, and other possible in the process special spearles of hay and straw. The sceilings, and other possible inhabitants are invariably are stolen. These roundups quently assisted by the militant carrying out important registers. The searched of life; dimediately searched. The that note is forewarned. The searched woods and remain there is searched and remain there is a farmhouse during the night syard, and remaining there is authorities have reason to  | either the day or the night.  als were normal occurrences  ces from several garrisons  dup   |

| 2 | 5 | X           | 1   | Δ             |
|---|---|-------------|-----|---------------|
| _ | J | $^{\prime}$ | - 1 | $\overline{}$ |

SECRET

-2-

.

with partisans or is involved with them in any way, such searches and night watches may be carried on without interruption for a month or more.

Specific Roundups

- 4. In July 1949, there was a roundup in the area between Aleksandravas and Kartena (55-55N, 21-28E). The roundup was provided by the assassination the previous night of a kolkhoz chairman, Dikoris (fnu).
- 5. On 9 May 1949, beyond the village of Sateikiai, which is located about two kilometers from Kretinga (55-54N, 21-15E), Soviet forces were searching for partisan bunkers and hideouts.

SECRET