1. The fundamental idea of the future war plan of the eastern bloc under orders from Moscow is characterized by the following principles:
 - a. The offensive fronts will be in the west and south.
 - b. The defensive fronts will be those of Alaska and in general Eastern Siberia.
2. The grouping of forces, according to operational plans issued to the Soviet General Staff stationed at Yalta, will be as follows:
 - a. Western Grouping: Concentration east of the Curzon line to a depth of 200 kms. This concentration has already been accomplished and the troops in the area are disposed as follows:
 - 1) One group around Brest-Litovsk, largely motorized and mechanized, with heavy motorized artillery. Direction of operations: Brest-Litovsk, Warsaw, Berlin, Brussels.
 - 2) Right wing along the Baltic Sea and the North Sea, including Holland in its operational front.
 - b. Southwestern Grouping: Concentration around Warsaw, extending through eastern Hungary and the Sibiú Massif in Romania. Direction of operations: Zagreb, Trieste, Milan, Turin, and France. The group in northern Italy (Po Plain) will send a spearhead in the direction of Rome and Calabria.
 - c. Southern Grouping: Concentration in the Caucasus of the principal forces. The secondary forces will be concentrated in Bulgaria and will consist of: a tank army, a Russian infantry army, and a cavalry corps. The greater part of the Bulgarian forces will be responsible for the occupation of Thrace and for action against Turkey. The rest of the Bulgarian forces will be directed against Greece. The greater part of the Yugoslav forces also will be directed against Greece, and Albania will furnish 60,000 men for this purpose. The following Yugoslav forces will be directed toward the north, in the direction of Italy: six infantry divisions, two cavalry divisions, two artillery divisions, and one tank division.

Comment: The "groupings" defined above are probably synonymous with the newly created "defense zones"
