Dick,

I think it is great, as I mentioned a few days ago, that you have been able to take the lead in the latest discussions of the I&W machinery. Please let me know if you need any help in any way in the current project. I have been out of the I&W business for three years, so I am not at all up to date on many of the current approaches. I nevertheless do have a few thoughts on the matter, and will jot them down separately and send them to you soon.

More important, I want to make sure that you know that I still do have some of the old studies and what remains of the INDICO files, so if you want any of them, let me know and I will try to find them.

The principal ones that I still have are:

1. Your 1972 NIOC study, which you borrowed last year.
2. Our basic study recommending establishment of SWS, June 74.
3. The March 73 report.
4. IDA Study on the Watch Committee/NIC, July 69.
5. My study for the DCI on Crisis Management, June 75.
6. Files of the old SWWG that and I served on, and the more recent (and inactive) SWRG.
7. Various files of other I&W approaches, Watch Committee material, Indicator lists, DCID's, briefings, etc.

All of this is contained in about six safe drawers of material in my office; five more drawers went to [redacted] much more is at SWS, and more has been tossed. One of my tasks, now that I have finished the 150-page Field Support and Foreign Liaison Handbook (which was a big priority for us), is to sort out this scattered I&W material, put it in better order, salvage some for whatever office may inherit it here, send some to [redacted] and destroy more. I have a loose inventory of all these files if you want to glance at it, or have time to do so.

If you want, I can retrieve the copy of the Handbook from you, since you have so much on your platter now that is more pressing.
