ABSTRACT

The report contained here is actually a brief history of ONE's predecessor in ORE and its attempts to establish a meaningful estimates program. The report covers the problems of ORE--the lack of precedent, the incompetent personnel, and the lack of clearly defined functions; the theory that ORE operated on in preparing estimates, the deficiency in ORE's evaluations, ORE's liaison problems with IAC agencies, the efforts of the Dulles-Jackson Report, and the formation of the Special Staff and the Estimates Production Board.
