25X1

Central Intelligence Agency

Washington, D. C. 20505

DIRECTORATE OF INTELLIGENCE

23 January 1985

SUDAN-LIBYA: Prospects for a Reconciliation

Summary

We believe there is at least an even chance that President Nimeiri will make a tactical reconciliation with Libyan leader Qadhafi before mid-year. Nimeiri is facing a deteriorating economy, eroding security in southern Sudan, and dim prospects for additional support from his allies. For over a year, Qadhafi has actively sought an accommodation as part of a broader effort to limit support to his opponents and end his diplomatic isolation. A reconciliation would do little to solve Nimeiri's domestic problems, but it would offer him the considerable advantages of at least temporarily suspending Libvan subversion and support for Sudanese dissidents.

25X1

Nimeiri would view any such agreement with Libya as a temporary measure and not a replacement for his ties with the United States. Nonetheless, a Sudanese-Libyan reconciliation would inevitably alter the tone of Nimeiri's relationship with Washington. Khartoum multilateral forums.

25X1 would be less inclined to participate in military excercises with the United States and less supportive of US positions in

25X1

25X1

* * * * *
Branch, Arab-Israeli Division, Office of Near Eastern and South Asian Analysis, at the request of the National Intelligence Officer for Africa. It was	25 X 1
coordinated with the National Intelligence Officer for Near East and South Asia and within the Directorate of Intelligence. Information as of 22 January 1985 was used in preparation of this paper. Comments and queries are welcome and should be addressed to Chief, Arab-Israeli Division,  NESA M# 85-10026C 25X1	25 X 1
	25X1 25X1
	25 X 1

Sanitized Copy Approved	d for Release 2009/12/09 : CIA-RDP85T	01058R000405760001-4
			25
•		ę
•

President Nimeiri's recent conciliatory gestures toward the rebellious south have been turned aside, and there is little prospect in the near term for a political settlement of the conflict. Moderate southern politicians are divided over the region's administrative structure, and major insurgent leaders continue to rebuff Nimeiri's overtures. The Libyan- and Ethiopian-backed southern rebels stepped up their activity last month in what may be the start of an offensive. Government forces are hardpressed to contain rebel attacks, and vital development projects remain shut down. Nimeiri has appealed to his benefactors, primarily Egypt and the United States, for additional military assistance to combat the insurgents, especially helicopter gunships and transport aircraft, but has not received a response satisfactory to him or his armed forces.

Since last fall, Nimeiri has tried to placate foreign and domestic critics by slowing Islamization and releasing key northern opponents from detention, in addition to seeking reconciliation with the south. These tactics have not yet generated the increased foreign economic and military support Nimeiri deems necessary to ward off civil unrest this spring or to underwrite a solution to the southern problem. Khartoum, which is in arrears to the IMF, has been reluctant to impose stringent austerity measures, fearing they would heighten the prospect of civil disorders. Chronic mismanagement of the economy has caused foreign donors to hesitate to provide further aid. In late December, the US Government officially notified Nimeiri it might cut off all assistance if he failed to comply with IMF measures.

Last October, Nimeiri publicly expressed his frustration over the slowdown of foreign aid and suggested a provocative solution to his problems in the south. In an interview with an Arab language paper published in London, Nimeiri said the Western press and financial institutions—who, he claimed oppose his country's Islamic line—had persuaded their governments to slow aid to Sudan. He specifically noted that "media pressure had led to a tangible delay in the delivery of US military and economic aid to Sudan at a time when the United States is aware of the threat to our country's national unity...." In an interview with Le Monde, Nimeiri said that if he found himself without means to defeat the rebels in the south, he would "have no hesitation in bringing about a reconciliation with Libya, the Soviet Union and Ethiopia."

25X1

25X1

25X1

25X1

25X1

Qadhafi has made at least five separate diplomatic overtures to the Nimeiri regime since last spring. These initiatives are part of a broader strategy of reconciliation and accommodation with neighboring Arab regimes intended to limit Arab support to alloya's opponents, lessen US influence in the region, and end Pripoli's diplomatic isolation. Qadhafi's efforts already have produced the political "union" with Morocco, the expansion of commercial and arms supply relationships with Italy, Greece, and Malta, meetings with Spanish Prime Minister Gonzalez and French President Mitterrand, and a fragile accommodation with France over Chad.  Saudi Arabia appears to have brokered the first significant between Sudanese contact, which took place last April in Mecca poetween Sudanese Vice President Tayyib and Libyan adviser Qadhaf al-Dam.  The meeting produced no agreement, and it appeared badly timed, in that it was preceded by the Libyan bombing of Omdurman in mid-March and followed by an attack by Sudanese backed Libyan dissidents in Pripoli in early May.  Nonetheless, Tayyib kept channels to Libya open.  Qadhafi has continued to increase his aid to the southern rebels, apparently calculating that time ir in might become more responsive if insurgent successes	Qadhafi has made at least five separate diplomatic overtures to the Nimeiri regime since last spring. These initiatives are possible to a broader strategy of reconciliation and accommodation with neighboring Arab regimes intended to limit Arab support to be inbya's opponents, lessen US influence in the region, and end pripoli's diplomatic isolation. Qadhafi's efforts already have broadced the political "union" with Morocco, the expansion of commercial and arms supply relationships with Italy, Greece, and Malta, meetings with Spanish Prime Minister Gonzalez and French President Mitterrand, and a fragile accommodation with France over Chad.  Saudi Arabia appears to have brokered the first significant between Sudanese contact, which took place last April in Mecca petween Sudanese Vice President Tayyib and Libyan adviser Qadhafil-Dam.  The meeting produced no agreement, and it appeared badly timed, in that it was preceded by the Libyan bombing of Omdurman in mid-March and collowed by an attack by Sudanese backed Libyan dissidents in Pripoli in early May.  Nonetheless, Tayyib kept channels to Libya open.  Qadhafi has continued to increase this aid to the southern rebels, apparently calculating that the libyan might become more responsive if insurgent successes
Qadhafi has made at least five separate diplomatic overtures to the Nimeiri regime since last spring. These initiatives are part of a broader strategy of reconciliation and accommodation with neighboring Arab regimes intended to limit Arab support to Libya's opponents, lessen US influence in the region, and end Tripoli's diplomatic isolation. Qadhafi's efforts already have produced the political "union" with Morocco, the expansion of commercial and arms supply relationships with Italy, Greece, and Malta, meetings with Spanish Prime Minister Gonzalez and French President Mitterrand, and a fragile accommodation with France over Chad.  Saudi Arabia appears to have brokered the first significant Libyan-Sudanese contact, which took place last April in Mecca between Sudanese Vice President Tayyib and Libyan adviser Qadhaf al-Dam.  The meeting produced no agreement, and it appeared badly timed, in that it was preceded by the Libyan bombing of Omdurman in mid-March and followed by an attack by Sudanese backed Libyan dissidents in Tripoli in early May.  Nonetheless, Tayyib kept channels to Libya open.	Qadhafi has made at least five separate diplomatic overtures to the Nimeiri regime since last spring. These initiatives are part of a broader strategy of reconciliation and accommodation with neighboring Arab regimes intended to limit Arab support to Libya's opponents, lessen US influence in the region, and end Pripoli's diplomatic isolation. Qadhafi's efforts already have conduced the political "union" with Morocco, the expansion of commercial and arms supply relationships with Italy, Greece, and Malta, meetings with Spanish Prime Minister Gonzalez and French President Mitterrand, and a fragile accommodation with France over Chad.  Saudi Arabia appears to have brokered the first significant Libyan-Sudanese contact, which took place last April in Mecca obstance Sudanese Vice President Tayyib and Libyan adviser Qadhafial-Dam.  The meeting produced no agreement, and it appeared badly timed, in that it was preceded by the Libyan bombing of Omdurman in mid-March and followed by an attack by Sudanese backed Libyan dissidents in Pripoli in early May.  Nonetheless, Tayyib kept channels to Libya open.  Qadhafi has continued to increase mis aid to the southern rebels, apparently calculating that the libyan in the produced of the southern rebels, apparently calculating that the libyan in the produced with the southern rebels, apparently calculating that the libyan in the produced with the southern rebels, apparently calculating that the libyan in the produced with the southern reponsive if insurgent successes
Qadhafi has made at least five separate diplomatic overtures to the Nimeiri regime since last spring. These initiatives are part of a broader strategy of reconciliation and accommodation with neighboring Arab regimes intended to limit Arab support to Libya's opponents, lessen US influence in the region, and end Pripoli's diplomatic isolation. Qadhafi's efforts already have conduced the political "union" with Morocco, the expansion of commercial and arms supply relationships with Italy, Greece, and Malta, meetings with Spanish Prime Minister Gonzalez and French President Mitterrand, and a fragile accommodation with France over Chad.  Saudi Arabia appears to have brokered the first significant Libyan-Sudanese contact, which took place last April in Mecca obstance Sudanese Vice President Tayyib and Libyan adviser Qadhaf al-Dam.  The meeting produced no agreement, and it appeared badly timed, in that it was preceded by the Libyan bombing of Omdurman in mid-March and followed by an attack by Sudanese backed Libyan dissidents in Pripoli in early May.  Nonetheless, Tayyib kept channels to Libya open.  Qadhafi has continued to increase mis aid to the southern rebels, apparently calculating that Nimeiri might become more responsive if insurgent successes	Qadhafi has made at least five separate diplomatic overtures to the Nimeiri regime since last spring. These initiatives are part of a broader strategy of reconciliation and accommodation with neighboring Arab regimes intended to limit Arab support to Libya's opponents, lessen US influence in the region, and end Pripoli's diplomatic isolation. Qadhafi's efforts already have conduced the political "union" with Morocco, the expansion of commercial and arms supply relationships with Italy, Greece, and Malta, meetings with Spanish Prime Minister Gonzalez and French President Mitterrand, and a fragile accommodation with France over Chad.  Saudi Arabia appears to have brokered the first significant Libyan-Sudanese contact, which took place last April in Mecca obstance Sudanese Vice President Tayyib and Libyan adviser Qadhafial-Dam.  The meeting produced no agreement, and it appeared badly timed, in that it was preceded by the Libyan bombing of Omdurman in mid-March and followed by an attack by Sudanese backed Libyan dissidents in Pripoli in early May.  Nonetheless, Tayyib kept channels to Libya open.  Qadhafi has continued to increase mis aid to the southern rebels, apparently calculating that the libyan in the produced of the southern rebels, apparently calculating that the libyan in the produced with the southern rebels, apparently calculating that the libyan in the produced with the southern rebels, apparently calculating that the libyan in the produced with the southern reponsive if insurgent successes
Qadhafi has made at least five separate diplomatic overtures to the Nimeiri regime since last spring. These initiatives are part of a broader strategy of reconciliation and accommodation with neighboring Arab regimes intended to limit Arab support to alloya's opponents, lessen US influence in the region, and end Pripoli's diplomatic isolation. Qadhafi's efforts already have produced the political "union" with Morocco, the expansion of commercial and arms supply relationships with Italy, Greece, and Malta, meetings with Spanish Prime Minister Gonzalez and French President Mitterrand, and a fragile accommodation with France over Chad.  Saudi Arabia appears to have brokered the first significant between Sudanese contact, which took place last April in Mecca poetween Sudanese Vice President Tayyib and Libyan adviser Qadhaf al-Dam.  The meeting produced no agreement, and it appeared badly timed, in that it was preceded by the Libyan bombing of Omdurman in mid-March and followed by an attack by Sudanese backed Libyan dissidents in Pripoli in early May.  Nonetheless, Tayyib kept channels to Libya open.  Qadhafi has continued to increase his aid to the southern rebels, apparently calculating that time ir in might become more responsive if insurgent successes	Qadhafi has made at least five separate diplomatic overtures to the Nimeiri regime since last spring. These initiatives are part of a broader strategy of reconciliation and accommodation with neighboring Arab regimes intended to limit Arab support to alloya's opponents, lessen US influence in the region, and end Pripoli's diplomatic isolation. Qadhafi's efforts already have produced the political "union" with Morocco, the expansion of commercial and arms supply relationships with Italy, Greece, and Malta, meetings with Spanish Prime Minister Gonzalez and French President Mitterrand, and a fragile accommodation with France over Chad.  Saudi Arabia appears to have brokered the first significant between Sudanese contact, which took place last April in Mecca poetween Sudanese Vice President Tayyib and Libyan adviser Qadhaf al-Dam.  The meeting produced no agreement, and it appeared badly timed, in that it was preceded by the Libyan bombing of Omdurman in mid-March and followed by an attack by Sudanese backed Libyan dissidents in Pripoli in early May.  Nonetheless, Tayyib kept channels to Libya open.  Qadhafi has continued to increase his aid to the southern rebels, apparently calculating that time ir in might become more responsive if insurgent successes	,	` •
Qadhafi has made at least five separate diplomatic overtures to the Nimeiri regime since last spring. These initiatives are part of a broader strategy of reconciliation and accommodation with neighboring Arab regimes intended to limit Arab support to hibya's opponents, lessen US influence in the region, and end Pripoli's diplomatic isolation. Qadhafi's efforts already have produced the political "union" with Morocco, the expansion of commercial and arms supply relationships with Italy, Greece, and Malta, meetings with Spanish Prime Minister Gonzalez and French President Mitterrand, and a fragile accommodation with France over Chad.  Saudi Arabia appears to have brokered the first significant Libyan-Sudanese contact, which took place last April in Mecca petween Sudanese Vice President Tayyib and Libyan adviser Qadhaf al-Dam.  The meeting produced no agreement, and it appeared badly timed, in that it was preceded by the Libyan bombing of Omdurman in mid-March and followed by an attack by Sudanese backed Libyan dissidents in Pripoli in early May.  Nonetheless, Tayyib kept channels to Libya open.  Qadhafi has continued to increase his aid to the southern rebels, apparently calculating that timeiri might become more responsive if insurgent successes	Qadhafi has made at least five separate diplomatic overtures to the Nimeiri regime since last spring. These initiatives are part of a broader strategy of reconciliation and accommodation with neighboring Arab regimes intended to limit Arab support to cibya's opponents, lessen US influence in the region, and end Pripoli's diplomatic isolation. Qadhafi's efforts already have produced the political "union" with Morocco, the expansion of commercial and arms supply relationships with Italy, Greece, and Malta, meetings with Spanish Prime Minister Gonzalez and French President Mitterrand, and a fragile accommodation with France over Chad.  Saudi Arabia appears to have brokered the first significant Libyan-Sudanese contact, which took place last April in Mecca poetween Sudanese Vice President Tayyib and Libyan adviser Qadhaf al-Dam.  The meeting produced no agreement, and it appeared badly timed, in that it was preceded by the Libyan bombing of Omdurman in mid-March and followed by an attack by Sudanese backed Libyan dissidents in Pripoli in early May.  Nonetheless, Tayyib kept channels to Libya open.  Qadhafi has continued to increase his aid to the southern rebels, apparently calculating that timeiri might become more responsive if insurgent successes
to the Nimeiri regime since last spring. These initiatives are part of a broader strategy of reconciliation and accommodation with neighboring Arab regimes intended to limit Arab support to Libya's opponents, lessen US influence in the region, and end Tripoli's diplomatic isolation. Qadhafi's efforts already have produced the political "union" with Morocco, the expansion of commercial and arms supply relationships with Italy, Greece, and Malta, meetings with Spanish Prime Minister Gonzalez and French President Mitterrand, and a fragile accommodation with France over Chad.  Saudi Arabia appears to have brokered the first significant Libyan-Sudanese contact, which took place last April in Mecca petween Sudanese Vice President Tayyib and Libyan adviser Qadhaf al-Dam.  The meeting produced no agreement, and it appeared badly timed, in that it was preceded by the Libyan bombing of Omdurman in mid-March and followed by an attack by Sudanese backed Libyan dissidents in Tripoli in early May.  Nonetheless, Tayyib kept channels to Libya open.  Qadhafi has continued to increase his aid to the southern rebels, apparently calculating that the libyan injury that wimeir might become more responsive if insurgent successes	to the Nimeiri regime since last spring. These initiatives are part of a broader strategy of reconciliation and accommodation with neighboring Arab regimes intended to limit Arab support to Libya's opponents, lessen US influence in the region, and end Tripoli's diplomatic isolation. Qadhafi's efforts already have produced the political "union" with Morocco, the expansion of commercial and arms supply relationships with Italy, Greece, and Malta, meetings with Spanish Prime Minister Gonzalez and French President Mitterrand, and a fragile accommodation with France over Chad.  Saudi Arabia appears to have brokered the first significant Libyan-Sudanese contact, which took place last April in Mecca petween Sudanese Vice President Tayyib and Libyan adviser Qadhaf al-Dam.  The meeting produced no agreement, and it appeared badly timed, in that it was preceded by the Libyan bombing of Omdurman in mid-March and followed by an attack by Sudanese backed Libyan dissidents in Tripoli in early May.  Nonetheless, Tayyib kept channels to Libya open.  Qadhafi has continued to increase his aid to the southern rebels, apparently calculating that Nimeiri might become more responsive if insurgent successes	Libyan Diplomat	tic Overtures and Sudanese Responses
The meeting produced no agreement, and it appeared badly timed, in that it was preceded by the Libyan bombing of Omdurman in mid-March and followed by an attack by Sudanese backed Libyan dissidents in Tripoli in early May.  Nonetheless, Tayyib kept channels to Libya open.  Qadhafi has continued to increase his aid to the southern rebels, apparently calculating that the Nimeiri might become more responsive if insurgent successes	The meeting produced no agreement, and it appeared badly timed, in that it was preceded by the Libyan bombing of Omdurman in mid-March and followed by an attack by Sudanese backed Libyan dissidents in Tripoli in early May.  Nonetheless, Tayyib kept channels to Libya open.  Qadhafi has continued to increase his aid to the southern rebels, apparently calculating that the Nimeiri might become more responsive if insurgent successes	to the Nimeiri part of a broad with neighborin Libya's opponer Tripoli's diploproduced the possible and Malta, meetings	regime since last spring. These initiatives are der strategy of reconciliation and accommodation and Arab regimes intended to limit Arab support to ats, lessen US influence in the region, and end comatic isolation. Qadhafi's efforts already have colitical "union" with Morocco, the expansion of arms supply relationships with Italy, Greece, and so with Spanish Prime Minister Gonzalez and French
The meeting produced no agreement, and it appeared badly timed, in that it was preceded by the Libyan bombing of Omdurman in mid-March and followed by an attack by Sudanese backed Libyan dissidents in Tripoli in early May.  Nonetheless, Tayyib kept channels to Libya open.  Qadhafi has continued to increase his aid to the southern rebels, apparently calculating that Timeiri might become more responsive if insurgent successes	The meeting produced no agreement, and it appeared badly timed, in that it was preceded by the Libyan bombing of Omdurman in mid-March and followed by an attack by Sudanese backed Libyan dissidents in Tripoli in early May.  Nonetheless, Tayyib kept channels to Libya open.  Qadhafi has continued to increase his aid to the southern rebels, apparently calculating that Timeiri might become more responsive if insurgent successes	Libyan-Sudanese between Sudanes	e contact, which took place last April in Mecca
Produced no agreement, and it appeared badly timed, in that it was preceded by the Libyan bombing of Omdurman in mid-March and followed by an attack by Sudanese backed Libyan dissidents in Tripoli in early May.  Nonetheless, Tayyib kept channels to Libya open.  Qadhafi has continued to increase his aid to the southern rebels, apparently calculating that Nimeiri might become more responsive if insurgent successes	Produced no agreement, and it appeared badly timed, in that it was preceded by the Libyan bombing of Omdurman in mid-March and followed by an attack by Sudanese backed Libyan dissidents in Tripoli in early May.  Nonetheless, Tayyib kept channels to Libya open.  Qadhafi has continued to increase his aid to the southern rebels, apparently calculating that Nimeiri might become more responsive if insurgent successes	31-Daiii.
Qadhafi has continued to increase his aid to the southern rebels, apparently calculating that Vimeiri might become more responsive if insurgent successes	Qadhafi has continued to increase his aid to the southern rebels, apparently calculating that Vimeiri might become more responsive if insurgent successes	was preceded by followed by an Tripoli in earl	y the Libyan bombing of Omdurman in mid-March and attack by Sudanese backed Libyan dissidents in ly May.
nis aid to the southern rebels, apparently calculating that Vimeiri might become more responsive if insurgent successes	nis aid to the southern rebels, apparently calculating that Vimeiri might become more responsive if insurgent successes	Nonetheless	s, Tayyıb kept channels to Lıbya open.
nis aid to the southern rebels, apparently calculating that Vimeiri might become more responsive if insurgent successes	nis aid to the southern rebels, apparently calculating that Vimeiri might become more responsive if insurgent successes
			Ordhesi har antinud t
		nis aid to the Vimeiri might b	southern rebels, apparently calculating that pecome more responsive if insurgent successes
		his aid to the Nimeiri might b	southern rebels, apparently calculating that pecome more responsive if insurgent successes
		his aid to the Nimeiri might b	southern rebels, apparently calculating that pecome more responsive if insurgent successes
_	_	his aid to the Nimeiri might b	southern rebels, apparently calculating that pecome more responsive if insurgent successes
_	_	his aid to the Nimeiri might b	southern rebels, apparently calculating that pecome more responsive if insurgent successes
	_	his aid to the Nimeiri might b	southern rebels, apparently calculating that pecome more responsive if insurgent successes
	-	his aid to the Nimeiri might b	southern rebels, apparently calculating that pecome more responsive if insurgent successes
-3-	-3-	his aid to the Nimeiri might b	southern rebels, apparently calculating that become more responsive if insurgent successes rtoum's control of the south.

Sanitized Copy Approved for Release 2009/12/09 : CIA-RDP85T01058R000405760001-4
·
Benefits and Costs to Nimeiri of a Reconciliation
A reconciliation with Libya could cost Nimeiri much of the political and economic support he gets from his current allies. Nimeiri may believe that he is already losing it, however, and that reconciliation with Libyaor the threat of itwould give nim new leverage with his allies. He probably would anticipate being as successful as Morocco in presenting reconciliation as a fait accompli. He would try to portray his accommodation with the Libyans as merely a tactical ploy designed to confound his 'Communist" opponents. Nimeiri probably expects the most positive response from Riyadh, because of past Saudi efforts to mediate between Libya and Sudan. Cairo and Washington would be greater challenges, but he may believe that their concern for maintaining their own strategic and economic interests in Sudanand the absence of an obvious alternative to himself as Presidentwould temper their reaction.
We believe the most likely Libyan-Sudanese agreement would entail restoration of diplomatic relations and a suspension of support for each other's dissidents, rather than a political 'union" with Libya similar to that of Morocco. No agreement with Qadhafi wouldsolve problems with the economy or the south, but it

-4- 25X1 25X1

Samuzeu Co	ppy Approved for itelease 2009/12/09: CIA-INDF 6310 1030It000403/00001-4
		25 X 1
subversion Qadhafi mi an agreeme	least temporarily remove the extra burden of Libyan and support for Nimeiri's opponents in southern Sudan. Ight offer some economic aid as an inducement to reach ent. He could be expected to honor most of the anti-Qadha types of S gain for h undermine policy in dissidents	in the short-run, because the suspension of afi radiobroadcasts from Sudanese territory and of other Sudanese support to Libyan dissidents would be a major nim. Over the longer term, Qadhafi would still try to any government in Khartoum that did not condemn US the Middle East, particularly by using northern Muslim s, but this is of less concern to Nimeiri than solving
his immedi	ate problems.	25 X 1
Libya woul improved to paralleling Soviet mil resisted Martoum has with Moscomake an of be skeptic endure, the hope to Khartoum of also calcumum to the martoum to the hope to	e-benefit for the Nimeiri regime of a rapprochement with do be a more nonaligned image and the prospect of ties with the USSR. Sudan's relations with Moscownig those of Egyptmight improve enough to attract litary and economic aid. Khartoum has in past years Moscow's efforts to improve relations, but recently has carried on a series of low-level cultural exchanges ow. The speaker of the Sudanese parliament will soon efficial visit to the USSR. Although the Soviets would that any Libyan-Sudanese reconciliation could hey almost certainly would welcome the rapprochement in that it would provide an entree for themselves in or at least reduce US influence there. Moscow might have that closer Libyan-Sudanese relations would lead to reduce its support for opponents of Ethiopia's	051/4
Marxist re		25 X 1
blandishme Qadhafi is regime sin personal a deteriorat turn to Is his nation argument o recent rhe	lieve Nimeiri may be personally vulnerable to Libyan ents at this time. Although his antipathy toward profound, because of Qadhafi's efforts to topple his ace the mid-1970s, Nimeiri is increasingly driven by and political desperation. Concern with his own sing health has, in our opinion, led to his personal slam and his efforts to impose his religious views on a. Nimeiri is thus susceptible if Qadhafi pitches his on the theme of common Islamic goals. Indeed, Nimeiri's etoric suggests he believes Western allies are shunning
	se of his Islamization program.	25 X 1
If Lib Sudanese r	ons for the Southern Problem  Oya suspended or diminished its aid to the southern  Tebels, Nimeiri probably would lean even more toward a  Solution, reasoningwe believe incorrectlythat
	· -5-	25 X 1
		25X1

Sanitized Copy Approved for Release 2009/12/09 : CIA-RDP85T01058R00040	15760001-4
	25X
government forces would finally gain the upper hand. He still have to ask for additional military support from however, and to send northern troops south to fight the insurgents. The decline in morale among government for be checked only temporarily, if at all. The regime wou vulnerable to a military coup triggered by the southern	allies, ces would ld remain
	23/
The southern insurgents probably would respond in t term to a Nimeiri-Qadhafi reconciliation by stepping up attacks and placing maximum pressure on the regime, hop Sudanese military would move to replace Nimeiri. If th strategy failed, they would still have enough captured equipment and supplies to operate at a lower level. Th also maintain pressure on the regime by keeping importa water projects shut down through terrorism and kidnappi	their ing the is military ey could nt oil and ng of foreign nationals.	25X
Regional Implications
strained to the verge of military confrontationwould be highly upset by a Sudanese-Libyan accord. Cairo, ho might eventually see some benefits for itself in the lo An improvement of security in southern Sudan might rais for the resumption of work on the Jonglei Canal, a wate diversion project important to Egypt. It might also le Khartoum's pressure on Egypt for major military assista the south.	wever, nger run. e hopes r ssen
Saudi Arabia would give a Nimeiri-Qadhafi rapproche guarded support, and Riyadh might even offer Khartoum m economic assistance. As in the case of the Moroccan-Li Union, Riyadh would see the reconciliation as placing c on Qadhafi and reducing his subversive activities in th	ore byan onstraints
A Sudanese-Libyan accommodation would mean further polarization in North Africa. Algeria would be displea accord and probably would improve its relations with Eg to offset Qadhafi's latest gain. Morocco probably woul the agreement as another sign of Qadhafi's moderation i politics. Weak states that are potential targets of Li troublemaking, such as Tunisia and Niger, probably woul likely to conclude that they need to strike their own d	sed by the ypt to try d point to n regional byan d be more eals with
Qadhafi.	25X
6-	25X
	25X
	207

Sanitized Copy Approved for Release 2009/12/09 : CIA-RDP85T01058R000405760001-4

the reportedly agreed recently to establish consular relations ith the Libyans, might be prompted by Nimeiri's lead to further purgate relations, especially if Tripoli promises to suspend aid to Somali dissidents and offers economic assistance. Ethiopia ight make its own reconciliation overture to Sudan. Khartoum as reached several similar agreements with Addis Ababa in the ast; they rarely have lasted long. But each country, facing verwhelming famine and refugee problems, probably would consider breathing space in their long quarrel advantageous.  Nimeiri's foreign policy has been characterized by pragmatism and responsiveness to the domestic political demands of the coment. He is a master of sudden moves that throw his opponents of balance, and he has repeatedly demonstrated his capacity to hange policy dramatically. In the three years following the biyan-backed coup attempt of 1976, he made two rapprochements ith Qadhafi. The principal factor in Nimeiri's decision this ime will be his perception of whether his allies plan cutbacks folitical, economic, and military support.  Mimeiri would view an accommodation with Libya as a temporary easure that would not replace his ties with the United tates—and this is the line he would almost certainly take with Sofficials. He seems to value his relations with the United tates and probably has no desire to turn completely to Libya or he USSR. He may wait to see if his trip to Washington next both produces more economic and military support before moving head with Libya.  A Sudanese-Libyan reconciliation, however, would inevitably therefore the tone of Nimeiri's relationship with the United States.  A Sudanese-Libyan dissidents. In addition, Khartoum would be less likely to cooperate with Washington on projects such as the movement of Ethiopian Jews (Falasha) to Israel. Nimeiri is itiely to resist Qadhafi's pressure to condemn Camp David, but he Africa, at least on the surface. Somali President Siad Barre, the reportedly agreed recently to establish consular relations ith the Libyans, might be prompted by Nimeiri's lead to further parade relations, especially if Tripoli promises to suspend aid of Somali dissidents and offers economic assistance. Ethiopia ight make its own reconciliation overture to Sudan. Khartoum as reached several similar agreements with Addis Ababa in the ast; they rarely have lasted long. But each country, facing verwhelming famine and refugee problems, probably would consider breathing space in their long quarrel advantageous.  Nimeiri's foreign policy has been characterized by pragmatism of responsiveness to the domestic political demands of the ment. He is a master of sudden moves that throw his opponents ff balance, and he has repeatedly demonstrated his capacity to hange policy dramatically. In the three years following the bipyan-backed coup attempt of 1976, he made two rapprochements ith Qadhafi. The principal factor in Nimeiri's decision this ime will be his perception of whether his allies plan cutbacks for political, economic, and military support.  Mimeiri would view an accommodation with Libya as a temporary easure that would not replace his ties with the United States.  Nimeiri would view an accommodation with Libya as a temporary easure that would view an accommodation with Libya as a temporary easure that would view an accommodation with Libya as a temporary easure that would view an accommodation with Libya as a temporary easure that would view an accommodation with Libya as a temporary easure that would not replace his ties with the United States. The United States and probably has no desire to turn completely to Libya or head with Libya.  A Sudanese-Libyan reconciliation, however, would inevitably there the tone of Nimeiri's relationship with the United States. The tone of Nimeiri is relationship with the United States. The proper such as the movement of Ethiopian Jews (Falasha) to Israel. Nimeiri is the probably Africa, at least on the surface. Somali President Siad Barre, the reportedly agreed recently to establish consular relations ith the Libyans, might be prompted by Nimeiri's lead to further parade relations, especially if Tripoli promises to suspend aid of Somali dissidents and offers economic assistance. Ethiopia ight make its own reconciliation overture to Sudan. Khartoum as reached several similar agreements with Addis Ababa in the ast; they rarely have lasted long. But each country, facing verwhelming famine and refugee problems, probably would consider breathing space in their long quarrel advantageous.  Nimeiri's foreign policy has been characterized by pragmatism of responsiveness to the domestic political demands of the ment. He is a master of sudden moves that throw his opponents ff balance, and he has repeatedly demonstrated his capacity to hange policy dramatically. In the three years following the bipyan-backed coup attempt of 1976, he made two rapprochements ith Qadhafi. The principal factor in Nimeiri's decision this ime will be his perception of whether his allies plan cutbacks for political, economic, and military support.  Mimeiri would view an accommodation with Libya as a temporary easure that would not replace his ties with the United States.  Nimeiri would view an accommodation with Libya as a temporary easure that would view an accommodation with Libya as a temporary easure that would view an accommodation with Libya as a temporary easure that would view an accommodation with Libya as a temporary easure that would view an accommodation with Libya as a temporary easure that would not replace his ties with the United States. The United States and probably has no desire to turn completely to Libya or head with Libya.  A Sudanese-Libyan reconciliation, however, would inevitably there the tone of Nimeiri's relationship with the United States. The tone of Nimeiri is relationship with the United States. The proper such as the movement of Ethiopian Jews (Falasha) to Israel. Nimeiri is the probably
Nimeiri's foreign policy has been characterized by pragmatism and responsiveness to the domestic political demands of the oment. He is a master of sudden moves that throw his opponents for balance, and he has repeatedly demonstrated his capacity to hange policy dramatically. In the three years following the ibyan-backed coup attempt of 1976, he made two rapprochements ith Qadhafi. The principal factor in Nimeiri's decision this ime will be his perception of whether his allies plan cutbacks for political, economic, and military support.  Moreover and this is the line he would almost certainly take with Sofficials. He seems to value his relations with the United tates—and this is the line he would almost certainly take with Sofficials. He seems to value his relations with the United tates and probably has no desire to turn completely to Libya or he USSR. He may wait to see if his trip to Washington next onth produces more economic and military support before moving head with Libya.  A Sudanese—Libyan reconciliation, however, would inevitably liter the tone of Nimeiri's relationship with the United States. hartoum probably would be neutralized as the most effective base of operations for Libyan dissidents. In addition, Khartoum would be less likely to cooperate with Washington on projects such as he movement of Ethiopian Jews (Falasha) to Israel. Nimeiri is ikely to resist Qadhafi's pressure to condemn Camp David, but he robably would support the US position in regional and niternational forums less frequently than he does now.	of Africa, at least on the surface. Somali President Siad Barre, who reportedly agreed recently to establish consular relations with the Libyans, might be prompted by Nimeiri's lead to further apprade relations, especially if Tripoli promises to suspend aid to Somali dissidents and offers economic assistance. Ethiopia
Indiresponsiveness to the domestic political demands of the coment. He is a master of sudden moves that throw his opponents of for balance, and he has repeatedly demonstrated his capacity to hange policy dramatically. In the three years following the biyan-backed coup attempt of 1976, he made two rapprochements in the Qadhafi. The principal factor in Nimeiri's decision this ime will be his perception of whether his allies plan cutbacks for political, economic, and military support.  Mimeiri would view an accommodation with Libya as a temporary easure that would not replace his ties with the United tates—and this is the line he would almost certainly take with Sofficials. He seems to value his relations with the United tates and probably has no desire to turn completely to Libya or the USSR. He may wait to see if his trip to Washington next both produces more economic and military support before moving thead with Libya.  A Sudanese—Libyan reconciliation, however, would inevitably let the tone of Nimeiri's relationship with the United States. The tone of Nimeiri's relationship with the United States and probably would be neutralized as the most effective base of operations for Libyan dissidents. In addition, Khartoum would be less likely to cooperate with Washington on projects such as the movement of Ethiopian Jews (Falasha) to Israel. Nimeiri is itsely to resist Qadhafi's pressure to condemn Camp David, but he probably would support the US position in regional and international forums less frequently than he does now.	Conclusion
Nimeiri would view an accommodation with Libya as a temporary easure that would not replace his ties with the United tates—and this is the line he would almost certainly take with S officials. He seems to value his relations with the United tates and probably has no desire to turn completely to Libya or he USSR. He may wait to see if his trip to Washington next onth produces more economic and military support before moving head with Libya.  A Sudanese-Libyan reconciliation, however, would inevitably lter the tone of Nimeiri's relationship with the United States. hartoum probably would be neutralized as the most effective base of operations for Libyan dissidents. In addition, Khartoum would be less likely to cooperate with Washington on projects such as the movement of Ethiopian Jews (Falasha) to Israel. Nimeiri is is ikely to resist Qadhafi's pressure to condemn Camp David, but he robably would support the US position in regional and international forums less frequently than he does now.	Nimeiri's foreign policy has been characterized by pragmatism and responsiveness to the domestic political demands of the moment. He is a master of sudden moves that throw his opponents off balance, and he has repeatedly demonstrated his capacity to change policy dramatically. In the three years following the libyan-backed coup attempt of 1976, he made two rapprochements with Qadhafi. The principal factor in Nimeiri's decision this time will be his perception of whether his allies plan cutbacks of political, economic, and military support.
easure that would not replace his ties with the United tates—and this is the line he would almost certainly take with S officials. He seems to value his relations with the United tates and probably has no desire to turn completely to Libya or he USSR. He may wait to see if his trip to Washington next both produces more economic and military support before moving head with Libya.  A Sudanese—Libyan reconciliation, however, would inevitably liter the tone of Nimeiri's relationship with the United States. The hartoum probably would be neutralized as the most effective base of operations for Libyan dissidents. In addition, Khartoum would be less likely to cooperate with Washington on projects such as the movement of Ethiopian Jews (Falasha) to Israel. Nimeiri is inkely to resist Qadhafi's pressure to condemn Camp David, but he robably would support the US position in regional and international forums less frequently than he does now.	Implications for the United States
Iter the tone of Nimeiri's relationship with the United States. hartoum probably would be neutralized as the most effective base of operations for Libyan dissidents. In addition, Khartoum would eless likely to cooperate with Washington on projects such as the movement of Ethiopian Jews (Falasha) to Israel. Nimeiri is ikely to resist Qadhafi's pressure to condemn Camp David, but he robably would support the US position in regional and international forums less frequently than he does now.	Nimeiri would view an accommodation with Libya as a temporary measure that would not replace his ties with the United States—and this is the line he would almost certainly take with US officials. He seems to value his relations with the United States and probably has no desire to turn completely to Libya or the USSR. He may wait to see if his trip to Washington next month produces more economic and military support before moving whead with Libya.
-7-	Alter the tone of Nimeiri's relationship with the United States. Chartoum probably would be neutralized as the most effective base of operations for Libyan dissidents. In addition, Khartoum would be less likely to cooperate with Washington on projects such as the movement of Ethiopian Jews (Falasha) to Israel. Nimeiri is likely to resist Qadhafi's pressure to condemn Camp David, but he probably would support the US position in regional and
-7-	nternational forums less frequently than he does now.
-7-	nternational forums less frequently than he does now.
-7-	nternational forums less frequently than he does now.
-7-	nternational forums less frequently than he does now.

Sanitized Copy Approved for Release 2009/12/09 : CIA-RDP85T01058R000405760001-4

Sanitized Copy Approved for Release 2009/12/09 : CIA-RDP85T01058R000405760001-4	25	X1
•	25X1
To avoid Libyan criticism, however, Nimeiri would become less inclined to approve other forms of security	25	X1
cooperation with the United States, including participation in joint military exercises.	25	X 1