Dear Brian:

I want to express again my thanks to you for your participation in our discussion dinner on urban growth and political stability in the Third World. Interest in the subject by both the government and academic communities was demonstrated by the vigorous discussion that followed Joan Nelson's opening remarks. This is just what I wanted and I am grateful for your contribution.

You may assume that our National Intelligence Officer for Political Economy will keep in touch. For myself, I look forward to our next meeting.

Yours,

Dear Joan:

I want to thank you for your splendid contribution to our discussion on urban growth and political stability in the Third World. Interest in the subject by both the government and academic communities was demonstrated by the vigorous discussion following your remarks. This is just what I wanted and I am grateful for your contribution.

You may assume that our National Intelligence Officer for Political Economy will keep in touch. I hope your recently published book, Access to Power, is well received. I look forward to our next meeting.

Yours,
