- At the request of the Office of Global Issues, FBIS has provided updated information [redacted] on Cuban efforts to jam VOA broadcasts. OGI was particularly interested in the level of Cuban jamming of VOA's 1 January special program marking the anniversary of Castro's takeover of power. FBIS monitoring efforts determined that, while radio interference of VOA broadcasts on 1180 kHz was apparently intentional, it was consistent with the Cuban practice since July 1981, with no discernible increase. 25X1
- FBIS received a "green light" from the State Department on its plans for providing a high-capacity communications linkage between bureaus and with FBIS Headquarters ("INTERNET"). FBIS will concentrate the first phase of INTERNET on Latin America in accordance with guidance from the SSCI.
- On 19 December NPIC briefed Kenneth Adelman, Director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, at the State Department on the SS-20 and Soviet operational tactical missiles. The focus of the NPIC presentation was [redacted] [redacted] these mobile missiles and a discussion of the associated monitoring problems. 25X1

c. Mr. Alan Thompson, Chief of the National Archives and Records Service (NARS) Declassification Division, advised that the British are now following a more restrictive policy concerning the release of names of MI-5 and MI-6 personnel. Some apprehension was expressed that the OSS documents reviewed by a special team in the Classification Review Division (CRD) and then transferred to NARS might possibly contain British names. CRD has investigated this concern with knowledgeable personnel and are confident that we are in compliance with British policy throughout--even the more recent guidelines provided Mr. Thompson. Barring human error, there seems little chance of British names reaching the general public.

f. As a result of increased operational activity, the Agency's Advance Accounts as of 31 December 1983 totaled 28.6 percent more than last fiscal year's average, yet the total delinquent outstanding advances (i.e., over 90 days) have declined by 1.0 percent to a figure of 2.6 percent of all advances outstanding. Special emphasis on advances by Agency Budget and Fiscal offices has contributed greatly to this improvement.

g. Requirements concerning Social Security and other retirement contributions for new employees were successfully implemented in the Biweekly Payroll System.
