Narrative

Maurice Ernst has rendered outstanding service to the Central Intelligence Agency and to the US Government for a period of more than 30 years. His contribution has been unique and - throughout - one of distinction.

Mr. Ernst began his Agency career in June 1954 when he was assigned as a GS-09 analyst on Soviet economic affairs in the Office of Research and Reports, bringing with him rich experience previously gained in military service, a PhD degree from Columbia University, and three years duty as an analyst in the Department of State's Bureau of Intelligence and Research. He remained affiliated with O/RR (later the Office of Economic Reports) for the next 27 years, rising through positions of increasing responsibility in ORR/OER, including Branch Chief, European Satellites; Chief, International Research Area; Chief, International Division; Deputy Director; and, finally, Director of OER for a ten year period, 1971-1981. In September, 1981 he was named National Intelligence Officer/Economics, and served in that capacity until his retirement, to enter private business, in November 1984.

Throughout this CIA career Mr. Ernst has carried out additional, out-of-office, responsibilities in splendid fashion, gaining respect for CIA in the process. These duties have included Chairman of the NFIB's Economic Intelligence Committee; numerous presentations to top US policymakers and other senior audiences, in and out of government -- and for which he received many commendations; attendance at Harvard University's Advanced Management Program; successful recruiting efforts in academia; participation in numerous senior policy forums as the DCI's representative; the sponsoring of special equal opportunity recruiting programs at CIA; active contact with many of America's leading business and financial figures; and numerous consultations with senior officials abroad.

The above paragraphs provide only the barest outline of milestones Mr. Ernst has passed during the course of a remarkably distinguished career. In addition to performing his regularly-assigned responsibilities, he has been called upon by successive DCI's to undertake special tasks which demanded sophisticated economic judgment, incisive analytical ability, and objective integrity. He played a major role in creating the best economic research and analysis office in town, by far, helping develop a whole generation of expert CIA economic analysts. Through his enormous intellectual drive and insight, he encouraged analysts to more rigorously examine the issues at hand and thereby improve their assessments. And by putting his keen mind to bear on complex National Intelligence Estimates, he has been a principal contributor to the expansion and improvement of such interagency studies which has occurred in recent years -- and to their increasing utility to senior US policymakers.

In sum, Maurice Ernst has served this Agency long and very well in countless ways, large and small, both highly visible and behind the scenes. His record eloquently attests to his being a professional of rare ability and exceptional accomplishment. We believe he justly merits the recognition afforded by awarding him the Distinguished Intelligence Medal. He has not previously been awarded an Agency medal.
