PREFACE

This publication lists all the members of the Central Committee and the Central Auditing Commission of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union (CPSU) elected at the 27th Party Congress, held during February-March 1986. The Central Committee currently consists of 477 full and candidate members, and the Central Auditing Commission has 83 members.

According to the party statutes, these "ruling organs" of the CPSU are elected at national CPSU congresses that should be held at least every five years. New members can be elected to the Central Committee only at these congresses, but a candidate member can be promoted to full membership at any Central Committee plenum (according to the party statutes, plenums must be held at least every six months).

Who Makes Policy? Policy is made by the Politburo, currently composed of 12 full and seven candidate members:

Full members:

Geydar Aliyevich Aliyev
Viktor Mikhaylovich Chebrikov
Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev
Andrey Andreyevich Gromyko
Dinmukhamed Akhmedovich Kunayev
Yegor Kuz'mich Ligachev
Nikolay Ivanovich Ryzhkov
Vladimir Vasil'yevich Shcherbitskiy
Eduard Amvrosiyevich Shevardnadze
Mikhail Sergeyevich Solomentsev
Vitaliy Ivanovich Vorotnikov
Lev Nikolayevich Zaykov

Candidate Members:

Petr Nilovich Demichev
Vladimir Ivanovich Dolgikh
Nikolay Nikitovich Slyun'kov
Sergey Leonidovich Sokolov
Yuriy Filippovich Solov'yev
Nikolay Vladimirovich Talyzin
Boris Nikolayevich Yel'tsin

Significance of Election to the Central Committee

Because most power in the Soviet Union resides in the Politburo, the significance of Central Committee membership is difficult for outsiders to grasp. Most Western scholars agree that the Central Committee is not a forum for debate on policy issues, although it has the potential to become one should the Politburo be disrupted by a political crisis. Central Committee membership is centrally planned and includes the leaders of the USSR's most important organizations—party, government, military, security organs, and media—as well as token representatives of the working class.

A party member's election to the Central Committee signifies his arrival in the nation's political elite. As a member of the Central Committee, he:

- Participates in its discussions of national issues.
- Is privy to many party secrets.
- Comes into contact with the country's policymakers—CPSU Central Committee Politburo and Secretariat members—all of whom are Central Committee members.
- Enjoys special privileges (in such areas as shopping, travel, housing, vacations, and health care) reserved for Central Committee members and their families.

The Central Auditing Commission

The CAC, an additional layer of the elite, is one step below candidate membership in the Central Committee and, like the Central Committee, is elected at national CPSU congresses. It appears to have powerful oversight responsibilities, including review of the party budget and the financial activities of CPSU institutions and the examination of the way letters and complaints are handled in the party's central organs. It serves largely as an honorary body, however, and only occasionally acts on its responsibilities.

Some Central Committee Statistics

The rate of turnover at the 27th Party Congress was substantially higher than that of the 26th—41 percent of the full Central Committee members were replaced this year, as compared to 25 percent in 1981. This considerable turnover reflects the high rate of change in top-level positions in the Soviet Union rather than any change in representational patterns in the Central Committee and Central Auditing Commission.

For the first time since the Stalin era the number of full members of the Central Committee decreased—from 319 in 1981 to 307 in 1986. The number of candidate members, however, increased from 151 in 1981 to 170 in 1986, and the slight decrease in the number of full members of the Central Committee may disappear as some of these candidate members are promoted. Additionally:

- Of the 307 full Central Committee members, 182 were reelected and 23 elevated from candidate membership; 102 were newcomers to the Central Committee.
- 116 of the 170 candidate Central Committee members were newcomers.
- The CAC increased in size from 75 in 1981 to 83; 64 are newcomers.
- Soviet women upped their representation on the CPSU ruling organs from 32 in 1981 to 37 this year; most of the increase came from the worker ranks.

Name Sort Membership Listings

Official Soviet accounts of the 1986 Central Committee elections provide only surnames and initials of those elected as full members, candidate members, and CAC members. Sections I, II, and III of this reference aid are alphabetical listings that provide the full names of the individuals in these three groupings, the year each was first elected, birthdates and nationalities, and the position held at the time of the 27th Congress elections. For those individuals who have changed jobs since 6 March, both positions are given—first the current position and then the one held as of 6 March. Inclusive dates are also given for members who previously held different Central Committee status—i.e., full members who were formerly candidate or CAC members; candidate members formerly in the CAC; and, in one case, a candidate member who was formerly a full member.

Position Sort Membership Listing

Section IV of this reference aid is a combined listing of Central Committee and CAC members broken down by the positions held at the time of the election on 6 March 1986. Many of the officials who shortly thereafter moved into positions warranting membership on the Central Committee or CAC are listed under their new positions under the assumption that their new assignments were anticipated by party authorities at the time of the election. These officials are denoted by asterisks.

An analysis of the officials elected to the CPSU leading organs in 1986 shows that an individual's job continues to be the strongest indicator of whether he will be elected to the Central Committee or to the CAC. However, position is clearly not the only indicator, as shown by the election of a number of retired officials to the party's leading organs.

There were few changes in representational patterns for Soviet organizations and institutions from the 26th to the 27th Party Congresses. A few that are noteworthy include:

- The Ukrainian Republic—whose special status is demonstrated by the fact that it is the only republic represented on the Central Committee and CAC by party secretaries other than the republic first or second secretary—gained a representative; it now has five such secretaries.
- The Georgian and Kirgiz premiers were the only two of the 15 republic premiers not elected to the Central Committee, a move that presaged their removals from their government posts in April and May, respectively.
- The largest concentration of Central Committee and CAC membership from the USSR ministries is in the Ministry of Defense, which is represented by 39 officials. Although the number of military district chiefs on the Central Committee and CAC was reduced, all four of the recently-appointed commanders of the theater/regional commands were elected full members of the Central Committee.
- Whereas all 11 RSFSR deputy premiers were elected in 1981, two, Vladimir Demchenko and Aleksey Kalashnikov, were not reelected this year. Each was elected deputy premier over 15 years ago, and their failure to gain reelection may portend their removal from their government posts as well.

One unusual development this year was the reelection to the Central Committee of a number of officials who had been retired or removed from their positions—a move contrary to Soviet custom. Among these reelected officials are some closely associated with past regimes and policies: for example, Boris Ponomarev, Nikolay Tikhonov, Nikolay Baybakov, Sergey Gorshkov, and Georgiy Sizov.

No information is available on the positions held by some Central Committee and Central Auditing Commission members elected for the first time at the 27th Party Congress.
