SUBJECT Soviet Spying

GORDON PETERSON: The CIA says that important existing and future American weapons were put in jeopardy by a spy for Poland. In a study prepared for Congress, the CIA says a convicted American engineer passed secrets about the B-1 bomber and the radar-evading Stealth warplane.

The revelations came as the House Intelligence Committee studies how successful the Soviets and their allies have been in acquiring Western technology.

The spy in question, William Bell, who worked for Hughes Aircraft, is now serving an eight year prison term.
