CENTRAL AMERICA s s s SUMMER OF DECISION

"The national security of all the Americas is at stake in Central America. If we cannot defend ourselves there, we cannot expect to prevail elsewhere. Our credibility would collapse, our alliances would crumble and the safety of our homeland would be put in jeopardy."—President Reagan, addressing a joint session of Congress in April.

A primer on conflict in Central America—and its implications for the U.S.

The report (which was still in production at press time) focuses mainly on Nicaragua, where, says producer Bob Rogers, the Sandinistas have "consolidated power and alienated significant portions of the population." Moreover, Nicaragua has funneled Soviet arms to leftist guerrillas in El Salvador, prompting the U.S. to respond in kind by supporting anti-Sandinist rebels in Nicaragua.

And in Honduras, a nation bordering both El Salvador and Nicaragua, the Reagan Administration is trying to build "a military bastion as a counterbalance to the Sandinist Marxists," according to Rogers. The report also examines the military situation in (and U.S. aid to) beleaguered El Salvador.

Robin Lloyd and Richard Valeriani are the correspondents. (60 min.)
