

FLETCHER KNEBEL
 . . . luncheon speaker

Knebel Listed As Speaker At Luncheon

Fletcher Knebel, novelist and former Washington correspondent, has been known to write fiction so realistic and studded with detail that it could turn out to be chilling fact.

That seemed to be the way with his "Seven Days in May" and his "Night At Camp David." Now he has written a new novel, "Vanished," a mystery based on the disappearance without a trace of a close friend and adviser to the President of the United States.

Knebel will discuss his new book at the Washington Post Book and Author Luncheon, scheduled for 12:30 p.m. Feb. 15 at the Sheraton-Park Hotel.

Also speaking at the luncheon will be Elizabeth Gray Vining, author of "I, Roberta," and Leonard C. Lewin, who wrote the introduction to "Report from Iron Mountain on the Possibility and Desirability of Peace."

Tickets at $4.50 each are available at the front counter of The Washington Post and at the following book stores: Better Mouse Trap (Alexandria), Brentano's, Center (Bethesda), Chevy Chase Bookshop, Cucumber (Bethesda), Doubleday, Francis Scott Key, Hecht's (Washington), Kann's, Paul Pearlman's, Savile, Sidney Kramer's, Woodward & Lothrop (Washington), and World Affairs.
