The Planning Group, Office of Strategic Services consists of:

a. One member appointed by the Secretary of State, two members appointed by the Chief of Staff, U.S. Army, two members appointed by the Commander-in-Chief, U.S. Fleet and the Chief of Naval Operations, and four members including the Chairman, appointed by the Director of Strategic Services.

Members of the Advisory Committee advise the Planning Group as to how their respective agencies can be of assistance in insuring the success of Strategic Services plans.

d. All major projects and plans for Strategic Services include measures for political, cultural, and economic pressures to be applied. In the case of economic pressures, the projects and plans indicate only the results desired from the Office of Economic Warfare. *

* Now consolidated under Office of Foreign Economic Administration.

~~SECRET~~

e. All major projects and plans for Strategic Services are integrated with military and naval programs by the Planning Group, Office of Strategic Services and after approval by the Director of Strategic Services, are submitted to the Joint Chiefs of Staff through the Joint Staff Planners for final approval.

6. FACTORS

a. GENERAL: ^{As Fed} The nature of problems affecting Strategic Services activities is influenced by military, political, economic, psychological, and sociological factors. Successful prosecution of Strategic Services operations depends upon a realistic knowledge of the areas in which such operations are to take place, of the above factors, and of the opposing enemy activities which can be used to our own advantage. The intelligence agencies of Strategic Services must provide this information in order to insure adequate and coordinated planning for operations in the field. Strategic Services intelligence must know and evaluate peoples and their problems, the aims and weapons used by both adversaries and friends, and above all, the weaknesses and divisions that exist within given countries — the "soft spots" or "vulnerabilities" which are targets of Strategic Services activities. Such intelligence must be thoroughly objective, adequately detailed, up-to-date, accessible, and specifically focused on the problems facing Strategic Services planners and operatives.

b. MILITARY FACTORS:

(1) The military factors important in the employment of Strategic Services are those bearing on strategy and on military operations.

(2) In general, those factors bearing on military strategy deal with the enemy situation within an enemy or enemy-occupied territory, or within a territory which may be occupied by the enemy, and include those elements vital to our own military strategy, such as:

- (a) The enemy's military organization and dispositions, his plans and counter-plans;
- (b) His industrial establishment;
- (c) His resources and channels of supply;

- ██████████
- (d) His weaknesses and vulnerabilities;
 - (e) Those elements in his setup most harmful to our strategy;
 - (f) His organization for control of occupied areas and areas which he may in future occupy.

(3) Those considerations bearing on military operations deal with specific objectives in the field of secret intelligence, morale subversion, and special operations which bear directly on the objectives and plan of the theater commander and which will further his military operations.

(4) Bearing in mind that neutral territory may be occupied by the enemy, Strategic Services plans, organizes, and directs its activities in anticipation of future events in those areas in consonance with military plans and with our national policy.

c. POLITICAL FACTORS:

(1) In general, the important political factors in the employment of Strategic Services are those which can be used to exploit the weaknesses within the enemy's political organization and which enhance our own position. Such factors include:

- (a) Political weaknesses within enemy countries between the leaders, the military, and the people;
 - (b) Political weaknesses between enemy partners;
 - (c) Political weaknesses of the enemy with respect to neutral countries;
 - (d) Dissident elements within enemy and enemy-occupied territory;
 - (e) Refugee and emigrant groups abroad.
- (2) Political pressures may be applied by:
- (a) Undermining the faith of enemy peoples in their leaders and their form of government;
 - (b) Discrediting enemy puppet governments;
 - (c) Creating division between enemy partners;
 - (d) Discrediting the enemy's influence in neutral countries and countering his political activities;

~~SECRET~~

(e) Supporting the dissident elements within enemy and enemy-occupied territory and promoting cooperation among them;

(f) Utilizing refugee and emigrant groups abroad.

(3) In dealing with political factors our plans and activities must conform to our national policy, and be correlated with those of our Allies. They must also follow the lines of current policy and its future implications. Such plans and activities cannot in themselves be considered as expressions of national policy unless emanating from an authoritative governmental source.

d. ECONOMIC FACTORS:

(1) The important economic factors in Strategic Services are those bearing on the economic strengths and weaknesses of the enemy. These include:

- (a) The enemy's material resources;
- (b) His industrial potential;
- (c) His shortages;
- (d) His sources of supply abroad.

(2) Economic pressures may be applied by:

- (a) Pre-emptive buying in neutral countries;
- (b) Elimination of foreign sources of supply;
- (c) Destruction of the enemy's credit;
- (d) Destruction of his industrial installations, food producing capacity and transportation facilities;
- (e) Disruption of his labor supply;
- (f) Meeting the demand of enemy and neutral populations for foods and materials.

e. PSYCHOLOGICAL AND SOCIOLOGICAL FACTORS:

(1) The important psychological and social factors which can be used to advantage in Strategic Services are those dealing with the weaknesses and vulnerabilities of the people of enemy populations, populations within enemy-occupied territories, and within neutral countries. Such factors include:

- (a) The morale of the enemy population, both military and civilian;

~~SECRET~~

- (b) Morale of populations within enemy-occupied or controlled territory;
 - (c) Temperamental and ideological weaknesses of the enemy;
 - (d) Sympathies of populations within neutral areas;
 - (e) Racial, religious, and social differences and hatreds between populations of the enemy nations and between groups within these nations;
 - (f) Racial, religious, and social differences and hatreds between groups within enemy-controlled or occupied countries;
 - (g) Racial, religious, and social ties with neutrals.
- (2) Such factors can be exploited by:
- (a) Explanation of our war objectives;
 - (b) Creating irritation, division, confusion, deception, terrorization, fear, appeasement, conversion, and discouragement within the enemy population;
 - (c) Utilizing the enemy's mistakes in psychology and in policy;
 - (d) Taking advantage of the war weariness of the enemy;
 - (e) Creating or increasing hatred of the enemy by populations of enemy-occupied and neutral areas;
 - (f) Lowering the will of the enemy population to resist;
 - (g) Taking advantage of the racial, religious, and social differences and hatreds.

7. APPLICATION

a. Strategic Services, to be effective, must constantly search for the weaknesses or factors in the enemy's military, political, economic, psychologic, and social chain, as revealed by current intelligence.

b. Having located these weaknesses or vulnerabilities, Strategic Services must play incessantly upon them by all possible means, must aim always for the breakdown of the enemy's military, economic, and political strength, the creation of division and unrest, dissatisfaction, and even terror, and thus assist in bringing about the eventual destruction of his will and ability to resist.

c. In neutral areas, Strategic Services must aim toward the encouragement of popular and official support for the United Nations.

Within organized theaters or areas, officers and agents of the Office of Strategic Services are under the direct control of the commander concerned, who must be informed of all plans or projects to be carried out within the theater or area and their current status. They may not engage in any activity which has not been approved by the commander concerned.

b. The Strategic Services Organization within theaters consists of (subject to the approval of the theater commander): a special staff section of the theater commander's staff; establishments for training, communications, and supply; field administrative and operating personnel.

(1) The Special Staff Section of the theater commander's staff is designated "The Strategic Services Section." Its chief is designated "The Strategic Services Officer" and is the principal advisor and representative of the theater commander on matters pertaining to Strategic Services. This special staff section must be so organized as to effectively assist the theater commander in the planning, organization, coordination, and control of all Strategic Services activities within the theater. The organization should, in general, follow that set forth in paragraph 10-b-(3) above, for the Office of Strategic Services. It should include only those branches applicable to operations within the theater.

(2) Such schools and training establishments are organized within the theater as are necessary to meet its training requirements.

(3) A communications base is organized within each theater to provide the necessary communications between the theater headquarters and the field operating personnel.

(4) The Strategic Services activities within the theater are performed by field operatives who, in general, are administered, supplied, and controlled by such number of administrative headquarters as may be necessary.

12. ORGANIZATION WITHIN NEUTRAL COUNTRIES

a. Strategic Services operations and activities (except economic and political pressures) within neutral countries are conducted by an organization controlled, administered, and supplied by the Office of Strategic Services. This organization requires a carefully selected and trained officer or civilian who is familiar with all phases of Strategic Services and who is also thoroughly familiar with conditions within the neutral country. He is designated as "Chief of OSS Mission."

b. The political and economic phases of Strategic Services within neutral countries are conducted by representatives of the State Department and the Foreign Economic Administration (FEA), respectively.

[REDACTED]

SECTION III — INTELLIGENCE

13. IMPORTANCE

a. Of first and paramount importance to the success of Strategic Services operations is intelligence. Before Strategic Services activities can be effectively planned and conducted, adequate intelligence covering all factors — military, political, economic, psychological, and social — must be available. This implies that an effective secret intelligence service has been organized and is in operation both in enemy, enemy-controlled, and neutral countries.

b. The secret intelligence service, to be effective, must employ both espionage and counter-espionage methods. In enemy and enemy-controlled territory espionage methods are necessary in order to obtain secret information of his military, economic, industrial, political, and social setup, and determine his strength or vulnerabilities or soft spots. In neutral and enemy-occupied areas both espionage and counter-espionage methods are necessary, not only to secure intelligence of the military, political, economic, psychological, and social factors, but also to determine and counteract the secret activities of the enemy. In neutral areas, furthermore, these methods are necessary in securing operational bases for penetration of enemy territory.

14. APPLICATION

a. An effective intelligence service implies three basic needs within the intelligence organization:

(1) Carefully selected and properly trained field agents for securing and reporting intelligence;

(2) Carefully selected and properly trained staff personnel for the evaluation and dissemination of the information received;

(3) An effective communications system.

b. It is apparent that an efficient intelligence service cannot be organized and operated without careful planning, training, and control. Intelligence and counter-intelligence agents must be carefully selected and trained. The key men in the organization must have a thorough knowledge of what intelligence and counter-intelligence is required. Our planning must indicate the intelligence targets or objectives and the details of information essential.

The field agents must be provided with simple codes and, where practicable, two-way radio communication sets. Security for protection of agents is essential, and every means must be taken to safeguard this service in the field.

c. Within theaters, in neutral countries, and in the Office of Strategic Services a carefully selected and properly trained staff of personnel must be available for the receipt, evaluation, and dissemination of the information received.

SECTION IV — PLANNING

15. DIRECTIVE

The Directive of the Joint Chiefs of Staff charges the Office of Strategic Services with the planning, development, and execution of Strategic Services for the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the development of doctrine covering such services. It charges the Planning Group, Office of Strategic Services, with supervising and coordinating the planning and execution of the Strategic Services programs.

16. PLANS

a. Plans covering the exploitation of Strategic Services factors in furtherance of actual or planned military operations must be developed for all enemy, enemy-occupied, and neutral areas.

b. Such plans should include not only the basic and special plans and programs for these areas, but detailed plans covering operations in the field.

c. These plans must be based upon adequate and up-to-date intelligence and upon studies and a careful analysis of factors made by trained experts who are familiar with the country and its population.

17. BASIC AND SPECIAL PLANS AND PROGRAMS

a. The Basic and Special Plans and Strategic Services programs are prepared under direction and supervision of the Office of Strategic Services Planning Group, by the Planning Staff, assisted by the Branch Planning Sections of SI, X-2, MO, and SO, and by FN, R&A, and other interested branches.

b. All of these plans and programs for Strategic Services activities must be integrated with military and naval programs by the Planning Group. Basic Plans, after approval by the Director of Strategic Services, are submitted to the Joint Chiefs of Staff through the Joint Staff Planners for final approval. Special Plans and Strategic Services Programs supplementary to Basic Plans, are forwarded by the Director of Strategic Services direct to the theater commander concerned (or Chief of OSS Mission in neutral areas) for his consideration. All Strategic Services activities within OSS and in the field will be based upon Strategic Services programs prepared and agreed to by OSS in Washington, and the theater or area commander or Chief of OSS Mission in neutral areas. Such programs will set forth the definite objectives for Strategic Services activities, in order of priority, for each theater, area, or country, and when agreed upon by OSS, Washington, and the field will become the over-all priority program of the OSS organization in the theater or neutral area and shall constitute its primary objectives until changed by the theater commander or by OSS with the approval of the theater commander.

c. In order to assist OSS, theater commanders, and Chiefs of OSS Missions in the implementation of Strategic Services plans and programs, Implementation Studies, covering supporting data, are prepared and furnished to all concerned.

18. OPERATIONS PLANS

a. The operations plans for Strategic Services activities within theaters are prepared for the theater commander by the Strategic Services Section of his staff, and should cover the implementation of the approved plans and programs for the theater or area.

b. Operations plans for approved Strategic Services activities within neutral countries are similarly prepared under the direction of the Chief of OSS Mission assigned to that area.

c. Within theaters these operations plans must be coordinated with the plans covering military operations, both as to timing and security control, and must be approved by the theater commander.

19. STUDIES AND SURVEYS

In addition to the Implementation Studies referred to in paragraph 17-c., above, such additional studies and surveys will be prepared as may be required in the development of plans and the conduct of operations. These will include the Population and Social Conditions, Political, and Economic Sections of Strategic Surveys, together with such maps, charts, and appendices as may be required to accompany these sections. They will also include such geographic studies, including maps, charts, and illustrations, as may be desired by the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the Office of Strategic Services, theater commanders, and the War and Navy Departments.

SECTION V — OPERATIONS

20. GENERAL

a. In view of the global scope of the war, Strategic Services operations should be initiated for all areas from both the over-all point of view and from the point of view of providing direct support to our projected or actual military operations.

b. From the over-all point of view, Strategic Services operations must be aimed toward over-all results. To this end, close coordination of the programs of our Allies, theaters, and neutral areas is essential.

c. From the point of view of direct support of military operations, Strategic Services activities must aim toward results which will aid and further our military operations within a particular theater. Such activities will include:

- (1) Intensification of intelligence and counter-intelligence;
- (2) Organization for and implementation of timed, active morale subversion;
- (3) Organization of sabotage groups and the conduct of sabotage activities in accordance with the program prescribed by the theater commander;

~~SECRET~~

(4) Organization of guerrilla groups for open resistance and for activities in support of military operations when directed by the theater commander;

(5) Organization of fifth column to operate when directed by the theater commander;

(6) Providing special personnel to act as interpreters, guides, for marking beaches, and for similar activities to aid the invading forces as required by theater commanders;

(7) Providing political, economic, and emergency assistance at the time of and immediately after invasion.

21. MORALE OPERATIONS

a. Morale Operations (morale subversion) will be conducted within enemy countries, within enemy-occupied or controlled countries, and from bases within other areas including neutral areas, where action or counter-action may be effective against the enemy.

b. Such operations have for their purpose:

SECTION VI — COMMUNICATIONS

26. COMMUNICATION FACILITIES

a. A proper system of communication facilities is an essential part of the operations conducted by the Office of Strategic Services.

b. Existing Army, Navy, and commercial facilities are used for communications between the Office of Strategic Services in Washington, the theater commander, and the base station within the theater.

c. To meet technical and security requirements, a special communication system, with special equipment, is necessary within theaters and areas for communication with agents in the field. This special system utilizes special radio equipment both at the base and with the agents in the field. The agent sets are small, low-powered, and capable of easy concealment. Base station equipment should be supplemented by mobile and portable types capable of being operated from different locations, when necessary, to receive reports from agents.

d. The Office of Strategic Services shall be responsible for the planning, organization, and operation of essential communications required for field and training activities in connection with approved projects.

27. SECURITY

In order to provide maximum security, very careful training must be given all agents and operators of this special equipment. The agents must be carefully selected and trained in the safeguards of operating procedure essential to communicating in dangerous territory. They must be taught cover and the use and protection of codes and ciphers and the type, form, and numbers of reports. They must understand the enemy's techniques of detection and the precautions to take against them. They must be schooled in the system of operation by "cells" under which the detection of one agent, or his transmitter or cipher, will not unduly endanger other operatives.

SECTION VII — PERSONNEL

29. TYPES AND SOURCES

a. While Strategic Services can be conducted by a wide variety of people from all walks of life, the particular types, especially among the key personnel, must be selected to fit the circumstances surrounding a given operation. Such personnel must have special qualifications, and must be particularly adapted for the task.

b. The special character of the operations may require that military, naval, and civilian personnel be used. Within theaters, all of the communications and administrative key personnel should be military or naval. Also, key intelligence and field operating personnel within theaters should be in the military or naval service. Every effort should be made to employ reliable alien groups for special operations (sabotage and guerrilla warfare). Within neutral areas, the employment of civilian personnel is normal.

b. Insofar as is practicable, all personnel procured in the United States, should receive training for special assignments prior to being sent to a theater or neutral area. Training establishments within theaters should be used to train personnel procured within theaters and to give such further specialized training to personnel procured in the United States as may be necessary for the particular tasks or operations.

c. Due to the nature of the work to be performed, all training must be conducted by experts in the operations to be executed. In every case, particular stress must be laid on cover, security, specific elements of enemy information desired, and methods of identifying enemy materiel, units, and equipment.
