Stanley Sporkin, the former general council at the CIA, was sworn in yesterday as a judge for the U.S. District Court for D.C. in an unusual ceremony at the CIA. Sporkin, whose appointment was held up for more than 18 months, was sworn in by U.S. District Court Judge Aubrey Robinson with CIA Director William Casey and several top CIA officials and friends present. It was believed to be the first time such a ceremony was conducted at the agency. A public swearing-in will be held on Feb. 21 . . .
