Dear

I'm sorry not to have gotten back to Martha or Ken about your trip to Europe. I somehow thought it was in March. We looked at your itinerary and concluded that none of the places you planned to visit was under any known threat from terrorist groups at the time. The Regional Security Officers at the US Embassies are best prepared to advise you of any particular local threat situation and are willing to provide such briefings. You might want to keep this in mind for future trips.

International terrorist groups have not traditionally attacked music groups or concerts. We advise all American citizens, however, to exercise prudence when traveling. Avoidance of places habituated primarily by Americans such as discos, bars and fast food restaurants is always a good policy.

All of the above is a little late for that trip but may be helpful for future ones.

I do hope you will let me know when you are going to be coming this way (I'll even give you a threat assessment). It's been too long a time and I would very much enjoy seeing you. I hope that I could have some of your time before or after your concert as well.

Warmest regards,

Sincerely,

William H. Webster
