USSR: Dominican Leader Comments on Cpsu Congress

{f3}PA052335 Moscow NOVOSTI in Spanish 0011 GMT 4 Mar 86{f1}

{em }

[Excerpts] [No dateline as received] A delegation of the Dominican Communist Party [PCD] is participating in the 27th Congress CPSU. PCD Secretary General Narciso Isa Conde was interviewed by a NOVOSTI correspondent.

Question: {em }In your opinion, what is the importance of the political and economic program presented in the political report of the CPSU'S CC [Central Committee {em-} FBIS] at the 27th Congress by Companero Gorbachev?

Isa Conde: {em }The report can be summarized in two words that in turn have great significance: {em }renovation and firmness. Renovation in all aspects of internal order: {em }revamping the economy, modernization, intensification of production, an increased and new role for the labor community, and reforms. This is extremely important for the USSR in this period which follows the phase of extensive development. This renovation is also related to all political institutions: {em }an increased power of the Soviets, of the people's control, the process toward self-government, self-management, accompanied by new methods to guide the party [sentence as received {em-} FBIS]. [passage omitted]

There is firmness in everything related to the policy toward struggling peoples; the acknowledgement of revolutionary progress with very specific expressions. For example, the victory of the second revolution in Latin America {em-} the Nicaraguan revolution and the firmness with which that revolution was defended by the solidarity of the USSR and other Socialist countries. All that has great value to us, because we occupy one of the main trenches in the anti-imperialist struggle.

Therefore, the combination of the two factors: {em }renovation and firmness, is very encouraging. This is not reflected only in Companero Gorbachev's speech, but also in the spirit of the congress, because all his statements were confirmed in the speeches of other delegates. [passage omitted]

The link that has been established also gets our attention. We clearly see how the debt, which is drawn from the blood of Latin American and Third World countries and the resources that have been looted via that financial mechanism, will nourish the military-industrial complex and the arms policy. There is a close link between the struggle for peace, firmly carried out by the USSR, and the struggle for national and social liberation by our peoples, which has one of its most serious expressions in the area in which we live.

Question: {em }What are the characteristics of the current situation of national liberation movements of the Caribbean peoples?

Isa Conde: {em }We are living a very important moment in the entire Caribbean area. It has become evident in the past few years that the claim that Cuba is an exception, a miracle, and a surprise is not true. There is another triumphant revolution {em-} that of Nicaragua, with its special and original aspects. It is not another Cuba, but an authentic revolution. This breaks up the scheme of U.S. domination in the area; it gives new impulse to all strugglers in Central America.

The struggle in El Salvador has reached truly significant levels; it reflects the continuity of this process. The Salvadoran people, headed by its vanguard, the FMLN, are fighting brilliantly. This is an indication that we are living good times in our area. The democratization process is also spreading to all of Latin America. The United States supported the Duvalierist dictatorship for 28 years, but it has fallen. And now, they are trying to limit the results of the struggle of the haitian people and prolong the remains of the tyranny.

Farther down south, the democratic wave is strong. We hope that it will soon reach Paraguay and Chile, where the situation is serious. We could say that Chile is a country in transition to a revolution; there is a popular struggle, an increasing rebellion against the Pinochet regime, which has also been supported by the United States.

We could conclude that there is a new revolutionary wave in Central America and a democratic wave in the entire continent that are interrelated and are challenging the entire U. S. domination in Latin America.
