47 dmitriy chuvakhin, 2d in series, on history of soviet-canadian relations, explains hitler's attack on ussr in 1941 led to upturn in relations with canada as canada joined allies and soviet resistance aroused sympathy and admiration among broad sections of canadian population and more and more ppl came to favor greater coop, leading to signing of agmt on establishing normal relations 12 jun 1942 and canadian resistance and solidarity continued throughout world and fight against nazis strengthened bilateral relations. (6.5 min: engna 072300)

48 dmitriy chuvakhin, 3d in series, on history of soviet-canadian relations: wartime coop was visit stage of these relations.

regrettably, hopes for postwar continuation did not come true. this was drift of britain and usa toward course of confrontation with former allies. canadian govt backed up notorious fulton speech of winston churchill. this was continued into milit coop with agmts btwn canada and usa. ottawa actively helped creation of nato. but not all strata of canadian public supported this course. canadians got tired of cold war. under trudeau in 70s there was return to coop after exchange visits by trudeau and kosygin. unfortunately there was another down turn at end of 70s.
