

SG1J

SRV
Ft Meade
15 Jan 87
Report

SUBJECT: Summary of SRV session for week of 12 Jan 87.

1. (U) Summary of site:

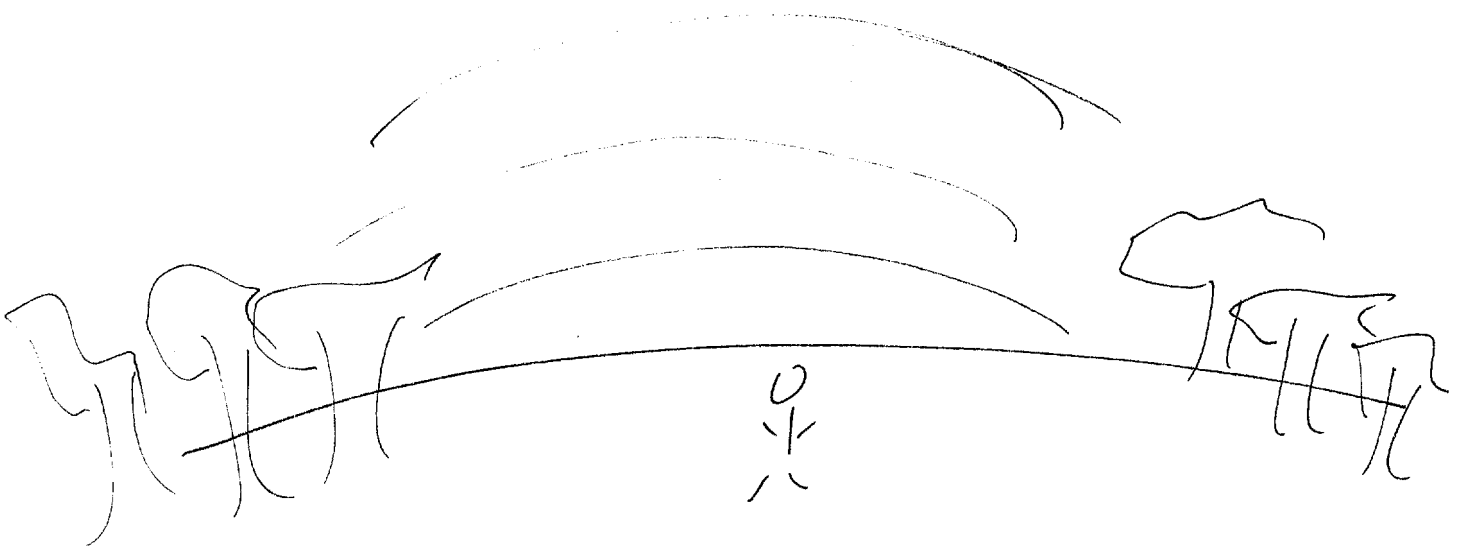

Site is a land/structure interface. There are multiple structures at the site in an area which is dry and dusty. The actual place of interest is an open (not densely populated) area, but appears to be near a town, possibly on the outskirts of a city or town.

At the site there is a large, gangly, moving object (AOL: ugly machine). This object is massive in size and weight. It has a very hard feel, and gives the shape impression of a stack of irregularly shaped blobs, smallest on top, largest on bottom. It has a rounded and ridged top covering what looks like very junky sides. The bottom of the object is long and straight in one direction, but curved under right above the "ground", and there is a perception of rounded, junky things (AOL: wheels) under and behind the "curved under" part.

There is a definite feeling of movement to this object. It has an impressive amount of force capability, and gives the impression that it pushes (rather than pulls) other large things.

2. (U) RVer's critique:

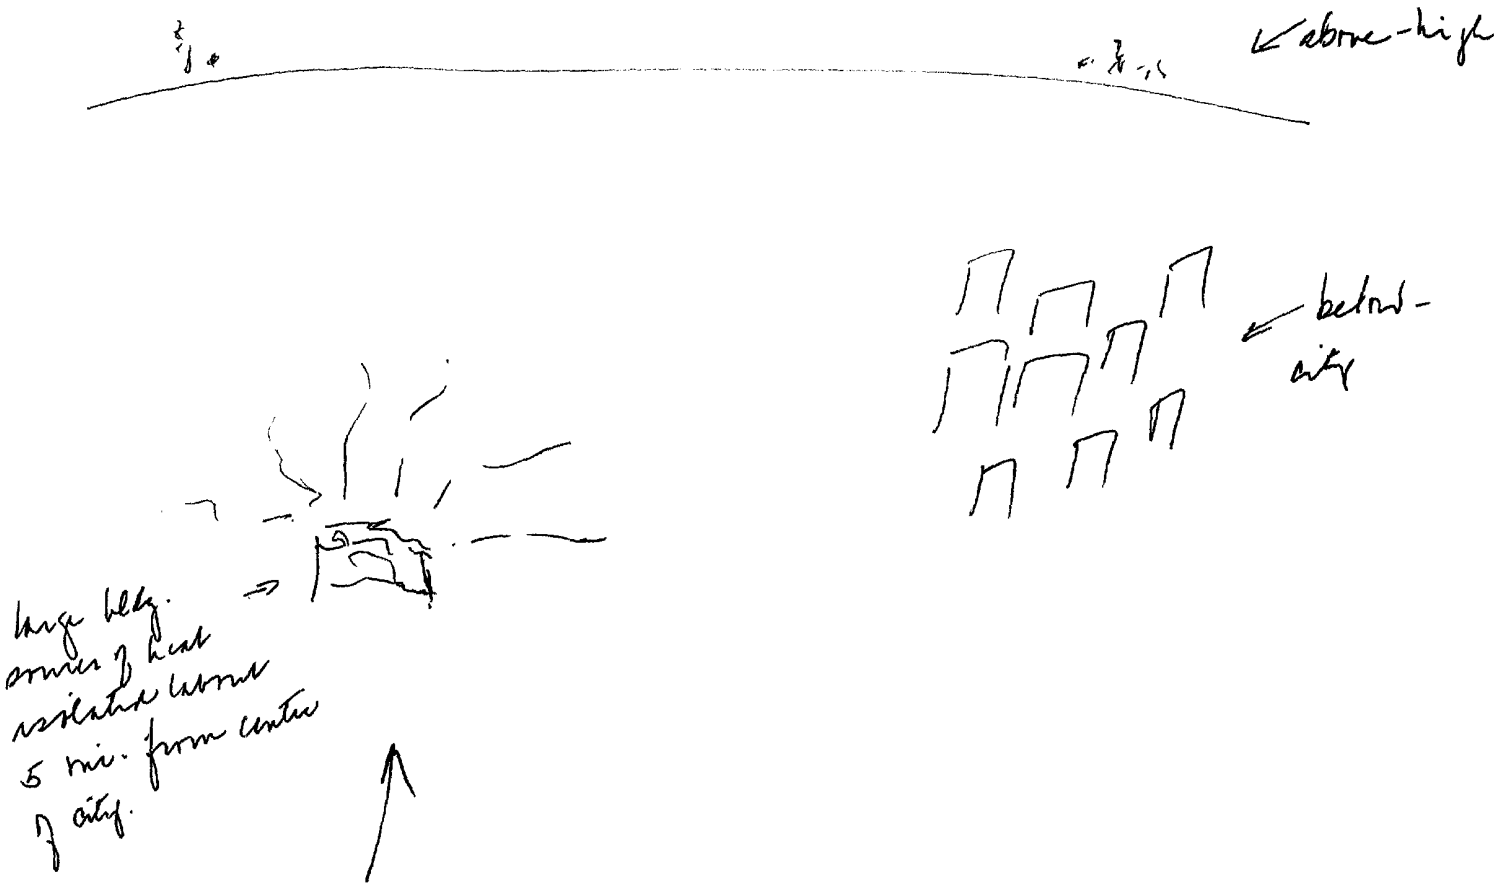

Impressions of the site seemed very concrete and unambiguous. There seemed to be very little tendency toward AOL Drive, and breaks were taken the few times when AOL seemed to be a problem. I feel that the information given is accurate in its content, but am personally disturbed by the fact that I immediately seemed to "home in on" only a few details of the site (rather than getting logs of garbage to wade through at first). That is what I would love be to be able to do in every session, but it is not my natural tendency, so the results must remain suspect until feedback confirms or allievates the suspicion. I will get feedback, won't I?

There is an open "field" at high elevation with crops of trees off to the sides. It is night - very dark, clear & crisp. One ~~person~~ person, a man, is there. Suddenly the sky is alight with radiating bands of color - brilliant white, a glow of red,
a faint hint of blue.

There is a roaring sound - like a giant boom of an explosion - and a very warm feeling - almost overwhelming. There is a sharp chemical smell in the air.

1-15-87
021

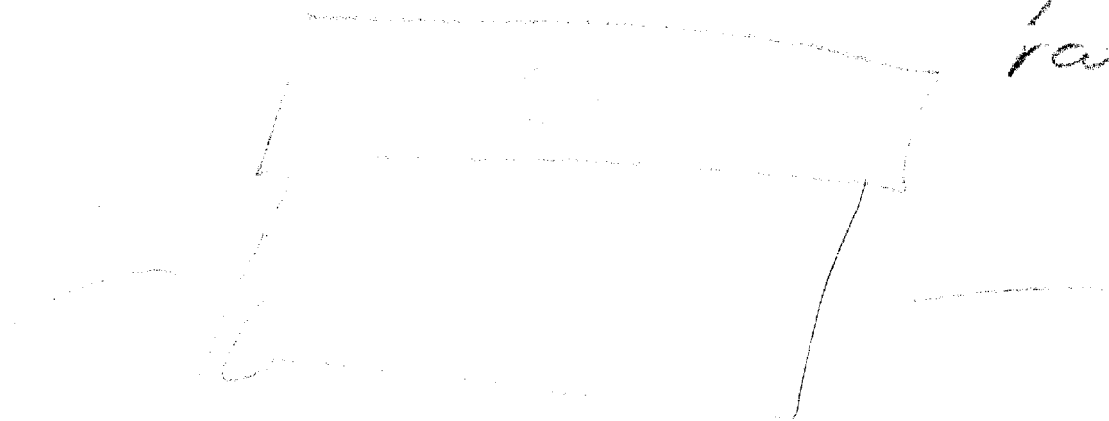

This building is the source of the light, heat + sounds.
 There is a feeling of vibration, stronger at the location of the isolated building, but also at the site of the city.

AOL Break - an earth tremor has/will caused this building, which contains highly volatile chemicals, to collapse about itself. Minimal injuries because of the timing of the 079

I felt that was outside looking at flat land with a flat square building on the land, with something on the roof. I was in an isolated area & the building was rather old

I was at a distance from the building &
I could look over it.