AFGHAN OFFICIAL EXPELLED BY PAKISTAN	 25X
The Government of Pakistan recently declared the Afghan Consul General in Peshawar persona non grata, reports the US Embassy in Islamabad. A Pakistani Ministry of Foreign Affairs official told US diplomats that Islamabad had evidence linking the Afghan to a failed attempt to bomb the Peshawar headquarters of resistance leader Gulbuddin Hekmatyar and to several other recent terrorist incidents. Afghanistan retaliated for the Consul General's expulsion by expelling the Pakistani third secretary in Kabul.	25X
Comment: Islamabad has long suspected the Afghan Consulates in Peshawar and Quetta of aiding KHAD activities in Baluchistan and the North West Frontier Provinces. Islamabad believes KHAD spent about $140,000 in 1984 in the North West Frontier Province, albeit with little success in disrupting the mujahidin or fomenting Pakistani resistance to the Zia government. Pakistan continues to tolerate an Afghan diplomatic presence, however, in order to maintain its	• consulates in Afghanistan to monitor Soviet and Afghan regime activities there.	25

Comment: Refugee administrators i	 . Pakistan use Afghan tribal leaders to help distribute	issistance to Afghan refugees. Although this system fo traditions, it also provides oppor and inequities. If the selling of more widespread, refugee and insur	families becomes to decline because buyers tend to	how less interest in

- -- The Konar flows through the southern part of the province roughly paralleling the Afghan-Pakistani border after entering Afghanistan near Barikowt. Before the war, about half the population--predominately Pushtun--lived in the Konar Valley. Much of Konarha's population has since fled to Pakistan. Asadabad, the provincial capital, and Asmar, the main military base about 30 kilometers to the north, are located on the Konar's banks.
- -- The Basgul (or Landay Sin) roughly parallels the border in the northern part of the province, joining the Konar near Barikowt. Kamdesh is the most important town in the valley. About 10 percent of the population--predominately Nuristanis--lived in this region before the war.
- -- The Pech Dara flows east through southern Konarha to Asadabad, located about halfway between Barikowt and the province's southern border. The valley contained about a quarter of the province's population before the war. Konarha's main importance to the insurgents is probably symbolic—the resistance began in Konarha and had some of its greatest victories there early in the war. Islamic fundamentalist resistance broke out in the Pech Dara Valley in December 1977, After the Communist coup in Kabul the following April, tribesmen in the Basgul Valley also rose against the government. By autumn, fighting was heavy in the Pech Dara, insurgents had seized most of the Basgul, and some insurgents were active in the Konar Valley.	25X1
