At this stage, rebel ter-rorism may present a less serious problem for the French Governnest than the continuing activity of right-wing extremists in France. There is reason to believe that the networks of plotters conspiring against De Gaulle and his policies have not yet been fully exposed. Bombings have continued in France and have even been stepped up in Algeria; distribution of threatening letters and paophlets put out by rightist extremists goes on. Such activity may be further stimulated by the trial of the insurgent generals which opens on 29 Kay. Discontent within the army is still wide-spread. As the Evian negotiations proceed, the frustration of the rightist extremists may prompt some of them to make an assassination attempt on Do Gaulle as a last desperate offort to prevent Algerian independence.

Soviet Attitudes

Soviet news media, whilewelcoming the start of negotintions, have cautioned that the French stand will determine whether the Algerian problem will be solved by "peaceful means or otherwise." Bloc commentators predict that the talks will be "difficult and tense."

Moscow has long maintained that only direct talks between the rebels and the Prench on a basis of equality can restore peace to Algeria. In March, following the announcement that talks would be held, Kbrushchev in conversations with Arab dinlomats took an encouraging line and the Soviet ambassador in Paris sought out De Gaulle to express Khrushchev's hope for a peaceful settlement. At the same time, Soviet First Deputy Presier Kosygin tried to stiffen the rebels' resistance to any compromise with France. advising then to demand recognition as the sole representatives of Algoria.

While there are advantages for the USSR in a continuation of the rebellion. Soviet leaders at the present time are probably inclined to support a settlement, provided the rebels can energe from the negotiations in full control of an independent Algeria, with limited, if any, ties with Prance.

CONGO

The government in Leopoldville has remained firm in its decision to reconvene parliament there, although the Stanleyville regime continues to demand that it meet at Kamina. Kasavubu appears to regard Gizenga's claim to represent the legal government as ruling out any compromise. The Leopold-ville radio has said the Congo crisis is "in its final stages" and has warned that "no delaying tactics will prevent...the convocation of parliament" by Kasavubu.

In contrast, there are indications that Leopoldville may be negotiating with Tabonbé's successors to assure Katanga's participation in parliament. The Kunongo triumvirate in Katanga reportedly has indicated that it is prepared to accept a Congo federation as proposed by Kasavubu. A Congolese politician has informed Ambassador Timberlake that the Kasavubu governant thas received a proposal from Munongo and is drafting a counterproposal.

Leopoldville probably feels that its success in blocking the return of UN representative Dayal to the Congo has strength-ened its hand. Hammarskjold informed VS officials on 22 May that Dayal would not be returned to Leopoldville because of the latest expressions of Congolese hostility toward him. Hammarskjold stated that Nehru had been informed and had agreed to recall Dayal.

CURRENT INTELLIGENCE WEEKLY REVIEW

The Stanleyville regime -confronted with the political threat of a rapprochement between Leopoldvillo and Elisabethville and with deteriorating economic conditions in Orientale Province -- has noved to bolater its military position. According to press reports, troops from Stanleyville have appeared in force in Rasai Province. Although there is no firm information that Gizenga plans any major offensive action, intercepted messages from Gizenga to Mrumah have urged that the Ghanaian President expedite the airlifting of Soviet arms to Stanleyville.

Reports of military activity in Kasai appear to have led Kasavubu to place Albert Kalonji under surveillance in Coquilhatville. A UN report has alleged that aggressive movements by Kalonji's Kasai army against tribal opponents followed a build-up financed by a Belgian mining company. Ghanaian UN troops, which recently were withdrawn from southern Kasai, have been ordered back into the area.

Indian Charge Rabman in Leopoldville, who on his own initiative has labored actively on Gizenga's behalf, stated recently that he did not believe Gizenga had enough votes in parliament to become premier. Sahman speculated that if Gizenga persisted in seeking the pre-paiership he would merely weaken the "nationalist" position and pave the way for dictatorship by some member of the present Leopoldville government.

Relations between the UN and Katanga authorities have continued atrained as a result of UN moves to retain control, by force if necessary, of key areas in northern Katanga. Although Munongo threatened armed resistance if the UN moved to take over airfields at Albertville and Nyunzu, he confined himself to a formal protest of the UN action and appeared anxious to avoid a serious rupture with the UN Command. IRAN

Rumors of a possible military coup have led the new francian Government to take special precautions. Prime Minister Ali Amini established a partial military alert on the evening of 19 May, and on 31 May be told an American official that, "to be on the cafe side," he had asked General Timur Bakhtiar, former chief of the Mational Intelligence and Security Organization (SAVAK), to go to the Caspian for a few days. Brigadier General Alavi-Xia.

deputy chief of SAVAK, reportedly has been relieved of his command temporarily; he left on 22 May for a trip to Israel. Goseral Feridus Farokhoia, commander of the Second Independent Infantry Brigade in Tehram, has been sent on an "inspection trip."
