them, but Compass has little sympathy. The U-Turn is a dangerous one against traffic and Compass laid on the rule for State drivers on the simple basis of safety. As mentioned to Betty, the dispatcher of the drivers in the GMA office, Compass does not want to die in Moscow and at no time, under no circumstances, shall any State driver make a U-Turn in front of JIG. I didn't lose my temper although they might (the Soviets) have thought that I did. I was planning on regular noon-time, and dinner-time observation of Turehanin St. It was all based on safety reasons and Compass will stick to his guns for he neither wants a smashup of a car nor does he want to be smashed up, because of a Soviet driver's carelessness - for convenience. They can wash cars all day long as far as Compass is concerned, and not sit on their "what do you call them" in the chauffeurs' shack at the Embassy.

9. Compass is lost as far as what he has reported on JIG as a drop site so will repeat what he thinks is necessary. The wall intersection - which can be identified from the plans previously forwarded - with the house proper, has a two bulb light just at that point. Compass would trust no one to say that there was or there was not surveillance, but would instruct the man - CHALK - to be prepared to make a quick heave over a twelve foot wall as though he were throwing away a package of "dirty pictures" or a book he'd prefer not to be caught with. He should practice with snow balls over twelve foot walls before he tries JIG. (Compass is not ignoring but taking into consideration your advice re the use of JIG but has not the time to analyze them all. What is now being said includes consideration of your objections and guidance.) The dog situation, the lighting of the back yard, the access of the back yard, can all be handled by Compass on the basis of being sick with too much drink, interest in the dog, loneliness, and anything else that will take care of getting out in the backyard at the right time and with a good excuse. Blank on the wall. If CHALK buys it we will know soon enough. Anything that comes over the wall, except for a person which has not happened since Compass has been here, Compass has all the reasons he needs to get the package to himself.

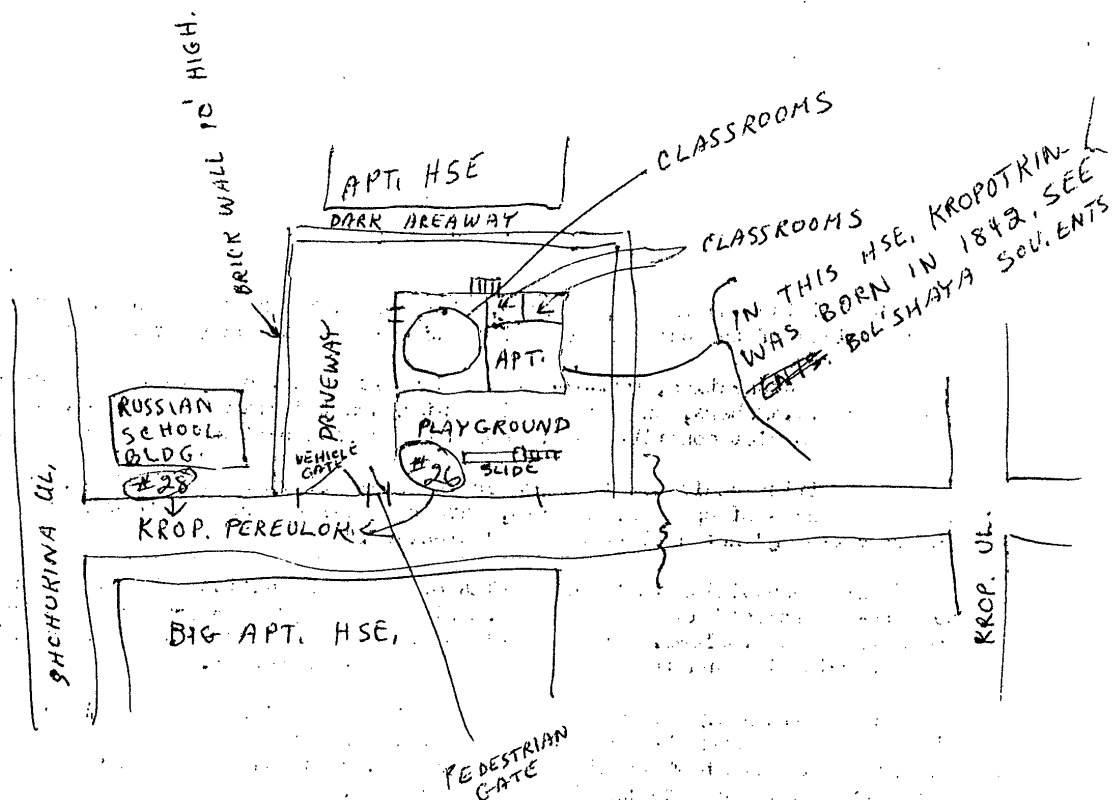

10. There are many personality conflicts, inter-service rivalries, and housing problems here in the city, and at JIG which complicate rather than simplify the problem. Realizing the absolute need, despite the local problems, Compass hopes that what is sent here will enable you to make up a plan for CHALK. Compass is as anxious, and perhaps more so than those of you at home, that this will work out.

11. The position from which CHALK works, however, limits his social and representational opportunities. Thank the Lord for that. Otherwise, I'd probably not be able to control my social mobility as well as Compass has been able to do recently. Just give the instructions for time and place and Compass will be able - almost without exception - to comply.
