1. Captain Morris,¹ an American prisoner of the Korean War, was studying the Chinese language at Peiping University.
2. Two other American prisoners of war were employed in Shanghai as English teachers.
3. Two more American prisoners of war, one of whom is a Negro, were in Wuhan studying the technology of water conservancy.
4. In addition to the American prisoner of war studying at Peiping University, there was also an American Negro studying the Chinese language. This individual left the United States on a trip to England some time ago. While in London, he managed to obtain a visa from the Chinese Communist Embassy there and subsequently traveled to China.

1. [REDACTED] comment. Reference is probably being made to Morris R. [REDACTED], formerly a corporal in the United States Army.
