

~~TOP SECRET~~ [REDACTED]

Weekly Surveyor

[REDACTED]
24 June 1974

It is possible, however, that the Pakistanis could have detected some radioactivity even though India maintains that no increase in radioactivity could be found even at the test site itself. The analytical capabilities of Pakistan to obtain useful information from the debris are unknown. Their primary aim, however, is to make this debris known publicly and thus gain support for their verbal attack against India. If it can be proven that debris actually crossed the border into Pakistan, then India could be considered to have violated the Limited Test Ban Treaty to which it is a signatory.
(S/NPD) [REDACTED]

~~Approved for Release~~

9

APPROVED FOR RELEASE

MAR 1986

~~TOP SECRET~~ [REDACTED]