-- The Chilean Government has let stand a court ruling that provides considerable relief to 12 Christian Democratic Party leaders banished to the inhospitable northern province of Arica. While rejecting habeas corpus petitions, the court said the in-country exiles could choose their residence within the province, and all have now moved to a resort area on the coast. The Supreme Court president indicated, however, that had the government appealed, he would have ruled in favor of the contention that under state of siege powers, authorities can specify the banishment locale. The absence of a government appeal is probably to the credit of Chile's Ambassador to the US Casus, who probably made a strong plea for moderation in the case.
