SOURCE Internationally known specialist, consultant, and head of the Gastroenterology Department at a US clinic.

In 1947, President Arbenz, then an Army colonel, visited our clinic for an examination. There was nothing serious the matter with him physically. However, the Neurologic Department found that he was a neurasthenic individual. In a report prepared for the patient, the clinic observed: "It is rather imperative for your sense of well-being, as well as for your happiness, to place yourself in a balanced plan of life. Proof of the above statement is the fact that while you were [here] you were feeling much better."
