RE: A Romanov File...

I am a Historian Investigator, writing a book about the Imperial Family of Russia. There have been many stories written about their possible rescue, and that there is a file formally identified as, "The Chiver's Papers."

The Soviet Union, in 1977, was aware, that these documents were to be declassified. In July 1977, the former Impatiev House, in Ekaterinburg, was leveled, to further eliminate any evidence for research.

The Documents on file, should be that of foreign archives, that indicate the Imperial Family did not die, but survived and continued their living in other countries.

This is all that I have read, regarding this subject. I am writing to determine whether these documents have been declassified.
