JAMAICA: Arms Headed for Colombian Insurgents Seized

[redacted] Jamaican authorities last week seized a shipment of 1,000 automatic rifles, 250 machineguns, and 10 mortars after learning that the Colombian end-user certificate for the arms was forged. The weapons arrived from Portugal on the Copacabana, a Panamanian ship probably owned by a British arms dealer, and were about to be flown to Colombia. [redacted]

Comment:

[redacted] The incident suggests that the FARC, which earns millions of dollars by taxing or controlling illicit drug production in parts of Colombia, has learned that it can get larger quantities of well-made military ordnance on the international gray arms market than it can locally within Colombia.
