1. Forwarded herewith as Attachment A is CARETINA's history of the Sonderkommando Rote Kapelle and its work against the Soviet espionage and underground nets in France and the Low Countries. The report should, chronologically, have preceded Reference B, the account of CARETINA's imprisonment in the Soviet Union following World War II. As explained in Reference B, we processed the report on his imprisonment first in order to gain more insight into CARETINA's attitude toward and experience in the Soviet Union. The attached report has not been reviewed by UPWIN, according to CARETINA, and he is most insistent that it should never be passed to UPWIN. We must assume that all the information in the attached report was obtained by his Soviet State Security, KGB, interrogators during his ten and a half years imprisonment in the USSR. We have not, as yet, gone over every point with him to ascertain exactly what he told his KGB interrogators but the Soviet State Security Service had ten and a half years of continuous interrogation to obtain the information.

2. Three of CARETINA's personal and emotional traits should be noted in reading the attached. All three are understandable in terms of his background but do color his interpretation of events although he attempts an objective presentation of events as possible:

a. CARETINA was an official of Amt IV, sub-section 2 A, of the RSHA, which in effect means he was a Gestapo officer. His efforts to portray Amt IV, the Gestapo, in a more favorable light are obvious. At the same time he lectures against the use of "executive" measures, i.e. police measures, as being less effective than counterespionage operations. He obviously does not wish to recognize the fact that the RSHA was primarily a police security force, dependent on police power to carry out its security responsibility, and that same police power enabled him to run the large and complicated counterespionage operations known as the Rote Kapelle.

b. CARETINA, as many of the former German Army officers and security police officials, is very emotional over the post-war effort to describe the Soviet agents working in the Rote Kapelle complex as "anti-Nazi resistance fighters". CARETINA is obsessed with making the record clear that these people were traitors, spying against their native land on behalf of an enemy power. We have not pointed out to him that most Western intelligence services now the Rote Kapelle complex to have been a complex of Soviet espionage nets and have no illusion about the "resistance" claims of the members. This would have involved revealing too much of our own knowledge of the Rote Kapelle complex.

c. CARETINA considers himself, even today, as a professional counter-espionage officer and counter-espionage operations are his dominating passion. His conclusions to the report include his apologia for running complicated double-agent and radio play-back operations as opposed to arresting and imprisoning spies. Here again he reveals that he was aware of the Gestapo methods in spite of his efforts to whitewash the German security police. He has not admitted yet that he was able to mount an operation the size of the German counterplayback of the Soviet principle agents because he had the complete support of the German military and security police organs in France and the Low Lands. He still thinks in terms of an Intelligence service that had absolute power and, so far, refuses to take into consideration the fact that the only services with that power today are the Soviet services and some of the satellite services in their individual countries. He has also refused to recognize the other fact contributing to his large and successful CE operations which is: the wartime conditions and the German DF'ing created an ideal situation for mounting the extensive playback and penetration operations which the Sonderkommando Rote Kapelle directed.

3. Anyone who has read the British Rote Kapelle Study Part II will be immediately struck by CARETINA's assumption that his Sonderkommando had almost complete control of all Soviet and Communist espionage/underground nets in France and the Low lands. The British advance a fairly positive theory that the two Soviet principle agents, TREPPER and KENT, played back against the GRU Headquarters in Moscow by the Germans, were able to notify Moscow through French CE communication channels, unknown to the Germans, of the German control of the Soviet espionage networks. CARETINA has not been interrogated directly on such a possibility but his report makes it fairly clear that he believes that his Sonderkommando, through the German DF'ing and monitoring facilities, had at least located most, if not all, of the secret transmitters and through his penetration of the French CP, the transmitters were controlled. He does state in the report that his greatest concern was the possibility of a French CP clandestine transmitter establishing contact with Moscow before the Germans could make certain of controlling it. If CARETINA's information on the depth of the German penetration of the French espionage nets and resistance groups is accurate, the British theory is weakened. CARETINA's description of how the Germans attempted to neutralize and seal off TREPPER after his escape also bears on this question. CARETINA believes that they were successful in their effort to plant in Moscow's mind the suspicion that TREPPER was being used by the Germans as provocation after his arrest because of the message the Moscow Headquarters sent the French CP to have nothing to do with TREPPER and warning against German provocation. CARETINA is firmly convinced that KENT was not practicing a triple-play when he was under German control. The British may have more information than given in the Study Part II to substantiate their theory because the whole matter of the German penetration and control of the French CP nets and French resistance is touched on very briefly in the study. The British may not have wished to reveal how deeply the Germans had penetrated the resistance because of the reflection on their own operations in the field.

4. CARETINA believes that counterespionage operations should be of a positive, aggressive nature and yield positive results. As he states, he wished to achieve more than the negative results of simply monitoring the activities of the Soviet nets and feeding the answers to the Director permitted by the German military command. His ultimate goal was to split the USSR from her Western Allies because he was convinced that any hope for Germany to survive as a nation lay in a quarrel between the two dominating elements of the Alliance, the East and the West. He used his radio playbacks to achieve this goal by feeding the USSR both factual and colored reports on the activities of the Western Allies. His goal and his efforts to achieve it all led to the trip to Moscow with KENT.

5. Information which does not appear in our files on the Rote Kapelle and which CARETINA includes in his report is following:

a. The company, "Helvetia Hamborgsellschaft", founded by the Sonderkommando Rote Kapelle to explain KENT's financial support to his GRU masters after the "Foreign Exceellente Raincoat". JIMEXCO and SIMEX had been dissolved by the Germans was not found in the British Study. The British Study confirms CARETINA's trip to Spain (see Station Comment to para. 74 of Attachment A) but assumes that it was connected with an investigation of TREPPER's agents. CARETINA explains that it was in connection with the German-backed company.

b. CARETINA recalls vaguely that TREPPER's mistress, Georjina de WINTER's first (or only) husband was an American. Inasmuch as the Headquarters advice, approval or disapproval which we shall be requesting, it is urged that the attached report be carefully read to enable Headquarters to advise us whether there is any purpose and value in continuing the CARETINA contact. There are numerous points in the attached report which need amplification and clarification but contact with CARETINA will not be resumed until some guidance from Headquarters has been received.

Recall that during the summer of 1956 when [insert name] was in Europe for the purpose of debriefing [insert name], a BOEBELBURG (with various spellings of the name) appeared at the American Embassy in Paris and was allowed to disappear without being questioned. When [insert name] returned to Headquarters, a trace on BOEBELBURG revealed that the French had been seeking a BOEBELBURG since 1945. Munich Base files contain a reference to a document, D-1956, which was a "United States Army request for any information on Karl BOEBELBURG because the French and Belkan authorities want him". The request is dated 1948. It seems logical that the French and Belgian interest was in Obersturmfuehrer u. Kriminaldirktor Karl BOEBELBURG, Chief of the Bzd (German Security Police High Command) Amt VI in France during WW II. The latter concentrated on penetrations of the French Communist Party and, according to CARETINA, was successful in this. The Soviets were also very interested in the Amt VI BOEBELBURG as CARETINA reported in reference B. We would, therefore, appreciate learning from Headquarters what information was received concerning BOEBELBURG who appeared at the American Embassy ca. August 1956 and what information was obtained concerning the French interest in BOEBELBURG. CARETINA is under the impression that Kriminaldirktor Karl BOEBELBURG died in Germany in 1947. The latter's son lives in Munich and is an acquaintance of CARETINA. If it is of any interest to trace the senior BOEBELBURG's movements after WW II or to ascertain whether he is living, CARETINA can contact the son.

Almost all of the names appearing in CARETINA's report are listed in the British Study Part II and attached Personality Index with some variation in spellings which we have noted. As mentioned above, the last pages of our copy of the British Personality Index are missing and we do not have the background data on Georgina de WINTER. We would appreciate all available information on de WINTER and any identification of the French Ce clandestine radio operator "ANDRE" mentioned in pages 75 and 76 of Attachment A.

Finally, the British Rote Kapelle Studies, Parts I and II, and the Personality Index are still classified TOP SECRET. If we are to do any detailed interrogation of CARETINA on the Rote Kapelle, information from the British Studies will have to be used. Headquarters' comments are requested.

The attached report was translated as literally as possible to retain the character of CARETINA's own report. It should be remembered that CARETINA wrote the attached without the benefit of files, entirely from memory, which accounts for the rather disorganized form of the report. We have attempted to clarify with Station Comments and parenthetical comments where it seemed absolutely necessary but have also left the report in its original form as much as possible. Attachment B is an index of the names appearing in the body of the report and was prepared to facilitate indexing.
