Attachment:
MGK-A-1164

1. Identification, description, significance and scope of Russian national minorities in emigration. Operational intelligence to support agent missions against the USSR. Operational leads to agent possibilities.
2. Exploration of Ukrainian, White Ruthenian, Georgian, Armenian, Azerbaidzhaner, North Caucasian, Turkestan, Volga and Crimean Tatar, Kalmuk, Latvian, Lithuanian and Esthonian emigrant groups and individuals. From the above and overt sources, information on inland resistance groups, channels to the target area (communication between emigration and resistance and non-political border activities), inland travel and communication, documentation, geographic and map references, cities, ports and hinterland areas, border and inland security measures, academic studies (modern history, psychology, customs).
3. CAPRIFORM.
4. Contact will be maintained by one case officer at clandestine meetings, the details of which can be arranged only after CAPRIFORM is established in Munich. We are assured of a considerable degree of control from the outset, because of the following factors.
  - a. CAPRIFORM will depend on us entirely for the economic and physical security of his family, who will be in Munich.
  - b. He will rely on our good-will and support for the furtherance of his academic and/or intelligence career.
  - c. His professional interest - the study of the Russian emigration - will induce him to submit to our general and specific policy and operational decisions, according to his explicit statement.
  - d. His activities will be checked by complete CIS surveillance and possibly by other CIC and/or police surveillance.
5. CAPRIFORM will function overtly as a faculty member of the University of Munich, engaged in teaching and research. The case officer will play the role of an American with undisclosed affiliations. The organization as such will play no role in the operation.
