An Erstwhile Moderate [Redacted]

(b)(3)

Before Iraq's invasion of Kuwait in August 1990, Aziz was viewed as generally advocating a moderate foreign policy. He was the official most closely associated with Iraq's attempt to improve its standing with the international community during 1988-90. Aziz consistently worked to mend relations with the United States before ties were officially reestablished in 1984. He was also a chief advocate of Egypt's reintegration into the Arab fold in the late 1980s. During that time, he supported a negotiated settlement of the Arab-Israeli conflict and urged the PLO to adopt moderate positions [Redacted] From 1992 to 1994, Aziz advocated cooperating with the UN Special Commission to lift sanctions against Iraq. Faithful Adherent to Hardline Policies [Redacted]

Although Aziz may occasionally present more moderate views to the President, he does not push them. He supports whatever decision Saddam makes and deals faithfully with the consequences of Saddam's actions. For most of the last decade, Aziz has hewed closely to Saddam's hardline policies. He spearheaded Iraq's rejection of successive UN resolutions, has repeatedly articulated Baghdad's belligerent stance toward sanctions and against allowing inspectors back into Iraq, has denied the regime's brutalization of Iraqi Kurds and Shias, and rejected the sovereignty of Kuwait. In numerous press interviews, Aziz has claimed that Iraq has fulfilled all of its UN-authorized requirements and that the lifting of the embargo has been long overdue, denying Baghdad's culpability for the Iraqi economic difficulties and placing all the blame on the United States. [redacted]
