NOTES

Portuguese Guinea - Guinea: Although Guinean President Toure publicly blames the Portuguese and other "imperialists" for the murder on Saturday of Amilcar Cabral, leader of the insurgency in neighboring Portuguese Guinea, his actions suggest he believes Cabral was killed by opponents within the rebel organization. In any event, Toure clearly is concerned over the possibility that internecine warfare will break out among factions of the insurgents. The Guinean military has taken control of the insurgents' headquarters in Conakry, and orders have gone out to regional governors to disarm all Portuguese Guinean guerrillas and keep them in their bases.
